

The Boy You Can Trust.

He's prompt on the job when the meetings begin, With his hand at salute and his face in a grin; He pays strict attention to all that is said, And the words that are spoken strick tight in his head. His dues and assessments are never behind, He's ready for service of any old kind. When orders are given he'll do them or burst, He's a boy you can bank on—the boy you can trust! Some fellows are very much brighter, I know, At camps and inspections they frequently show To better advantage; and some there may be Who understand Scouting from A through to Z. Who know how to rig up a telegraph set, To make fire by friction and such things—and yet When critical times are ahead of me, just Give me the fellow I know I can trust! He doesn't suspect, but it's true all the same, That he's getting his training for playing life's game. He'll find when he's older, as others have found, That there aren't enough boys of that kind to go round. Who tackle their work with a resolute heart Determined to finish whatever they start. And if you would succeed in this old world, you must Be sure you're the kind of a boy folks can trust! Boy's Life.

The Restitution Of Francoise

(Lucia Marruchi, in The Christian Family.) (Concluded.) That night a chastened and sorrowful Francoise was speeding on to Paris, and in her heart was a new light, a firm resolution to do penance for her sins. Three months later the clouds of war broke forth. Francoise immediately prepared herself to enter the service of her country. In course of time she proved to be an untiring, efficient nurse, greatly loved by all. Her fearlessness on the field of battle when the shells were bursting all around elicited the warm praise of the doctors, and she was several times recommended for decoration. At one time, though her arm had been slightly hurt, Francoise refused to leave her post of duty and in rescuing a wounded poilu she was struck by a shell. She was transported to the hospital and decorated amid the hushed tribute of the soldiers. Her injuries however, were so severe that she died shortly after she had been anointed. The body was brought home to the little Norman village of her girlhood. A medal gleamed on her breast and her lips were slightly parted in a smile. In death the father saw again the child he had loved so dearly ere her waywardness had caused him such bitter grief. People remarked that at the funeral Antoine Beauvais held himself erect, with the proud carriage of former days. Father Blanc had grown very feeble indeed in the course of the last few years and his voice quavered as he read the services. But his serene old face beamed and his eyes glowed with a holy light as he spoke in simple touching words of the beauty of a heroic death for God and France. A heavenly peace was reflected on the face of the dead woman. Her prayer had been answered. She had made restitution for the wrong she had done her loved ones.

The Measure Of A Man

By Anna C. Minogue, in Rosary Magazine Prosperity, at last, had come to Noble County, Noble County, as you perhaps know, is in Oklahoma, where they make millionaires overnight. So it happened that the people of Noble County woke up one morning and found themselves in the oil belt; and the

All Stuffed Up

That's the condition of many sufferers from catarrh, especially in the morning. Great difficulty is experienced in clearing the head and throat. No wonder catarrh causes headache, impairs the taste, smell and hearing, pollutes the breath, deranges the stomach and affects the appetite. To cure catarrh, treatment must be constitutional—alterative and tonic. "I was ill for four months with catarrh in the head and throat. Had a bad cough and raised blood. I had become discouraged when my husband bought a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla and persuaded me to try it. I advise all to take it. It has cured and built me up." Mrs. Hovea Rogers, West Liscomb, N. S.

With prosperity, of course, came a boom in the automobile business, and then naturally followed a campaign for good roads. Some one with a political pull got after the Governor, and he expressed his willingness to send convicts to Noble County to build a turnpike as soon as the farmers could agree among themselves as to its location. The Governor gave his promise in the summer, but it was not until the following spring that the decision was made; and only then through the peace negotiations, in the shape of a substantial check, of one of the oil magnates who lived in Kansas City. But what concerns this narrative is that the decision was made; otherwise, "Convict No. 125" would have continued to hoe cotton on the big farm north of McAlester and would have afforded no material for a tale.

It was a day in early April when Deputy Jim McKnight, with a crew of twenty men, set out for Noble County. They were all honor men but one. He did not know why that one had been turned over to him. The warden and his own reasons, doubtless, and Deputy Mac was not given to making inquiries. Nor could "No. 125" have enlightened him. But he was glad of the change. As he leaned back in the seat and watched the great country unfold its beauty, he realized that the view accorded him for the past two years had become a trifle monotonous. He could honestly say that previous to that time he had never had such a prolonged acquaintance with any landscape. When a man has to live by his wits, he soon exhausts the resources of a locality; besides, he was not insensible to the allurements of "over the hill."

to which the Deputy and his men were invited. The date selected was early in June, and the weather fitted the occasion. Automobiles, buggies and spring-wagons lined the way. A fourth of July picnic and a Confederate reunion rolled into one could scarcely have gathered such a crowd as assembled that day. Burgoo, the recipe for which had been brought to the new land by the Kentuckians, was boiling in the big kettle; motherly hands unpacked hampers and spread their manifold contents on the tables arranged under the trees; youth and maidens strolled about, children played on the grass; while mingling with the company, free as the freest, were the men from Deputy Mac's camp.

"No. 125," watching his fellow convicts, felt envious of their social qualifications, for he would not have had the courage to address one of the children. He sat down and, clasping his knees with his arms, began to watch the sky-line. His heart was pining for what lay behind it—freedom, his horse and Mollie. Mollie was waiting for him: Nothing could shake that belief from his heart, even though no promise bound them; for Mollie loved him, and Texas girls are true.

But the waiting was long; the days remaining seemed to stretch down from the horizon to his feet, a gray sullen regiment; and the old desire for liberty was throbbing in his breast. If he were guilty, he would buckle down to the job of waiting; but he was receiving another man's punishment. Surely the firing of a wild shot—which had only broken the officer's arm—by a drunken boy who had been balanced in the books of justice by these two years of imprisonment!

His eyes came back from the sky to the automobiles and wagons along the road. At the end of the line stood a horse, saddled and bridled. In a little while the burgoo would be done, and in the excitement of the dinner call he could easily reach that horse. Once on its back—! His eyes went back to the sky line.

Then he became aware that something was happening. He got to his feet and, looking behind him, saw a young woman, astride a big horse, centering across the field. She stopped at the edge of the picnic ground and swung herself out of the saddle—and the heart of "No. 125" throbbed painfully, so clearly did her ease and grace recall Mollie. But she was dressed as never Mollie had been dressed, and more than one man gasped as she walked carelessly forward in her high boots, breeches and flaring riding-coat.

Judge Brown who ran everything in Noble County, was master of ceremonies at the barbecue; hence, upon him devolved the duty of meeting the strange woman, who had thus unexpectedly arrived. "I am Miss Darrell," she said, as he approached, "the niece of Mr. Darrell of Kansas City."

At the announcement, Judge Brown's hat went off and swept the ground; for Mr. Darrell was the sender of the check which had brought the divided farmers together and made possible the inauguration of the great work. "My uncle hoped to be able to accept your invitation to attend the barbecue," she explained, "but was prevented by business. I was so awfully disappointed that he made Aunt fetch me down. We reached the ranch last night, but Aunt can't ride—and," she was laughing now, "you know all those automobiles over there quite surprised me. I'd think you would be pretty well churned riding in them on these roads."

While she was talking her eyes had been sweeping the crowd, and the face of each man felt their scrutiny. Judge Brown took her to his wife, but it was plain that the festivities were a disappointment to her. "Did she expect whispered the indignant Mrs. Brown to a neighbor, "to see us dancing around a whole ox like Indians!" She tasted the burgoo, honored Mrs. Brown by eating a slice of her cake, and then declared that she must be off.

DIARRHOEA

WAS SO BAD Could Scarcely Do Work.

Mrs. O. Pritchard, Elora, Ont., writes: "About a year ago I was troubled very much for a whole week with diarrhoea. It was so bad some days I could scarcely do my housework. I took two or three different kinds of medicine, but got no relief, and was just at the point of going to see the doctor when I explained my case to a friend. She put a half bottle of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry in my hand and said: 'You take this and you won't need any doctor.' Before I had emptied the bottle I was cured, and have never had any return of the trouble. I can truly say that 'Dr. Fowler's' is the best medicine I have ever used for diarrhoea."

Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry is not a new or untried remedy, as it has a record of 72 years of cures to its credit, and is recognized on all hands as the only reliable remedy ever offered to the public as a safe and certain cure for diarrhoea, dysentery, colic, cramps, cholera, cholera infantum, summer complaint and all looseness of the bowels, whether of children or adults. It is particularly good for teething babies.

Potash From Dust.

The British Board of Trade Journal publishes a remarkable article on the British supplies of potash, showing the important progress which has been made during the war in the production of potash in Great Britain. One of the most startling sources of the new supply is from blast furnace dust from which potash is obtained by a cheap and simple process consisting primarily in addition of a small proportion of common salt to the charge of the furnace which releases the potash present in the ore and causes it to be volatilized with the emerging gas as potash chloride. As the result of experiments on a large scale it has been estimated that it would be possible to recover 50,000 tons of potash salts per annum from blast furnaces alone, enough practically to meet the needs of the country. A factory has been erected at Oldburg near Birmingham designed to produce 400 to 500 tons of potash chloride weekly from blast furnace dust and a conversion factory is to be added where chloride need not be added where chloride is to be converted into other refined potash salts.

WEAK AND NERVOUS AFTER SERIOUS OPERATION.

After any serious operation or sickness, the nervous system is generally left in an extremely weakened condition, and a course of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will do more towards building it up than anything else. Mr. W. E. Grafton, 44 Davenport Road, Toronto, Ont., writes: "My wife underwent a very serious operation three years ago. After leaving the Toronto General Hospital she was in a weak, nervous condition. Having tried numerous medicines, from which she received practically no satisfaction, I decided to try Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. I am very pleased to say that they proved very satisfactory. She slept and ate well, and her whole physical condition improved wonderfully. I have always kept a box in the house, and find them very useful in cases of nervousness, sleeplessness and fatigue."

FLEISCHMANN'S YEAST

TO MAKE GOOD BREAD You must have Good Yeast

GOOD BREAD is, without question, the most important article of food in the catalog of man's diet; surely, it is the "staff of life." Good bread is obtainable only by using the Best Yeast, the best flour, and adopting the best method of combining the two. Compressed Yeast is in all respects the best commercial Yeast yet discovered, and Fleischmann's Yeast is indisputably the most successful and best leaven known to the world. It is uniform in quality and strength. It saves time and labor, and relieves the housewife of the vexation and worry which she necessarily suffers from the use of an inferior or unreliable leaven. It is, moreover, a fact that with the use of Fleischmann's Yeast, more loaves of bread of the same weight can be produced from a given quantity of flour than can be produced with the use of any other kind of Yeast. This is explained by the more thorough fermentation and expansion which the minute particles of flour undergo, thereby increasing the size of the mass and at the same time adding to the nutritive properties of the bread. This fact may be clearly and easily demonstrated by any one who doubts that there is economy in using Fleischmann's Yeast. If you have never used this Yeast give it a trial. Ask your Grocer for a "Fleischmann's" Recipe Book.
