Rev. D. O'Callaghan on Official Visit to Flatrock.

The sincere is the regret throughout the Parish of Flatrock, and Pouch Cove at the residence of Rev. D. O'Callaghan, who as Parish Priest there from 1916, and who has been in the new Parish of Mid-Cape Cove and Logy Bay. The Rev. Father, who was at times an energetic, zealous pastor, has no pains for the spiritual advancement of his flock, and a true, sincere friend, who has in the Parish endeared himself to all, both old and young, and consequently with pen-ultimate they met him after Mass yesterday to present him with their addresses.

Members of the Holy Name Society first with the presentation of their address read by Rev. D. O'Callaghan. President of the Society was the Rev. D. O'Callaghan.

Dear Sir—

The members of the Holy Name Society of Flatrock, having with profound regret of your departure from amongst us, seize this opportunity of to-day and tendering to you our most sincere and heartfelt wishes for your success in your new field of endeavor, we are glad to see you in your new field of endeavor, and while we miss you, we are glad to see you in your new field of endeavor, and while we miss you, we are glad to see you in your new field of endeavor.

Pte. Samuel J. Gillespie, Killed in Action.

With feelings of heartfelt sympathy we record the death of Pte. Samuel J. Gillespie. Like many others of our brave heroes who have already made the supreme sacrifice, he was killed in action, April 13th. Pte. Gillespie was amongst the first from Fortune Harbor to answer the call of King and Country, and although a mere lad he can be justly termed a true man. Being of a cheerful disposition he was a great favorite with all who knew him, and his death was a shock to his many friends. Pte. Gillespie is the son of Mary and the late John Gillespie. To his sorrowing mother, brothers and sisters we extend sincere sympathy.

Mrs. Gillespie has another son Pte. Patrick Gillespie now lying in Wandsworth Hospital suffering from a wound in the right arm. Shortly before he was wounded he voluntarily gave 450 cubic centimetres of his blood for transfusion to save the life of officer Goddard, of the Queen's Own Rifles. What more striking illustration of his bravery and generosity than this can we have. Capable of such a meritorious act as this for an entire stranger, what would he not do for his friends and comrades. Private Gillespie enlisted two years ago. —Members Queen Mary's Guild, Fortune Hr., April 9, 1918.

Defective Acoustic Properties.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—In reference to the difficulty experienced by the jury in hearing the evidence of the witnesses in the recent charge for manslaughter, I think it would not be out of place to make a few remarks.

In the first place the Supreme Court is very badly situated. It should be somewhere on the "higher levels" removed from the noise of traffic of the town. At times during the hearing of evidence yesterday the noise from Water Street was almost deafening, while when some bolt-makers started work near the front door on Duckworth Street it was impossible to hear anything.

In the second place the acoustic properties of the court room are dreadfully bad. These drawbacks, I suppose, cannot be altered now.

In the third place I would like to make some suggestions as regards the arrangements of the court room to the "powers that be." The presiding Judge, of course, very properly occupies the prominent position, though it is unfortunate that he has to sit with his back to the light, so that his expression cannot be clearly seen by the Jurors. The chief part of the room is taken up by the "dress circle" and, apart from the counsel engaged in the case, is empty or casually occupied by stray lawyers or members of the unprofessional public who have or think they have a right to a front seat, and who just drop in out of curiosity or to pass away an hour or so free of charge.

The prisoner is at the back of the court (perhaps as near the Judge as he wishes to get), but far removed from the witnesses who are giving evidence in the case in which he is the chief one interested.

While the Jurors (those unfortunate men who are made so much of while the preliminaries to their selection are going on, and who if after being called do not come up to the standard of good looks set by the counsel in the case are ignominiously ordered out of the box again), after they have been selected are corralled in any old uncoupled corner out of the way and troubled very little more about while the case is going on.

Now most witnesses especially when undergoing cross-examination, are more or less nervous, and being apt to speak in a low tone, so that the examination often sounds more like a private conversation than otherwise.

Now it seems to me that both the Prisoner and the Jury are rather important items in the performance, and should be allowed to occupy more prominent positions than they do.

Suppose the arrangement were something like this:

The Jury box in front of the Judge's bench, and the witness box in the rear of the counsel engaged in the case. The Prisoner between the Judge and the Jury on the left of the former and opposite the witness box, then all the important actors in the case would be within earshot of one another, and everything be more satisfactory all round.

Yours truly,
JUROR.

The Romance of Sabastopol.

(From the Memphis Commercial Appeal.)

"From Odessa, on to Sebastopol." Such is the Kaiser's plan as outlined in the general despatches. Sebastopol! What a word with which to wake the memory and fire the imagination! Here, on this promontory, jutting out into the Black Sea, in the legendary days of Greece, Iphigenia, daughter of Homer Agamemnon, was sacrificed in the temple of Diana after her preservation from the altar of sacrifice. From that shore her eyes must have watched the sea moodily, for her sentence was to slay every Greek who landed in the harbor. The story of her escape is the climax of one of the old Greek tragedies. Here on this site rose the old Tartar valley of Akhtis, and Genoese colonists built Balaclava like a suburb, eight miles away. It was Catherine II. of Russia who made the Crimea a part of that country and built the famous city of Sebastopol, the strongest citadel on the Black Sea; possibly at that time the strongest in the world. That was in 1783. In 1854 there blew through Europe the fierce storm of the Crimean War when Russia strove with France and England and Turkey over a question of church protection. Sebastopol became the storm centre, and the world had never seen such fighting as befell within sight of its walls. There the guns thundered on the Malakoff and the Redan day after day; and night after night the English soldiers lay under the stars and sang the songs of the camp, and as they sang "Forgo't was Britain's glory." Each heart recalled a different name. But all sang "Annie Laurie."

There fever and death walked through the ranks, and there Florence Nightingale, "angel of the Crimea," carried her ministrations to the wounded and dying. There, in the Balaclava district, on the winds of destiny went the "Charge of the Light

Incidents of the Zebbrugge Fight.

Vindictive took two black cats into action.

The Royal Australian Navy had a few men in the ships which got inside the mole.

Captain Carpenter, of Vindictive, had five bullet holes in his cap, the peak of which was shot away.

The captains' quarters of Iris and Dafoed, which were Mersey ferry-boats, are still labelled "Ladies only."

The body of Captain H. C. Hialahan, killed on board Vindictive, was according to his wishes, buried at sea.

Commander Brock, it is believed, fell very seriously wounded or dead when leading a party in the direction of a German battery on the mole.

When the crew of Vindictive went home on leave from Dover Captain Carpenter went on the platform and shook hands with all the men.

A Royal Marine who boarded a Hun destroyer at Zebbrugge said to a Hun before leaving the ship, "Sorry, old chap, but I'm a marine myself, so there's no harm in my taking your helmet." He wore it when he arrived back and some people took him for a German prisoner.

In his cabin in Vindictive at Dover Captain Carpenter in telling the story of the raid, said: "On the way across before the operation the Admiral made a signal to Vindictive, 'St. George for England' (it was St. George's Day), and the reply was

A Minister's Evidence.

That Piles or Hemorrhoids, Can be Quickly Cured by the Peace Cured Many Years Ago.

There has come to use recently these two letters from prominent men who bear unquestionable testimony in regard to Dr. Chase's Ointment as a prompt and lasting cure for piles.

These men give their evidence freely because they know what it means to suffer from the tortures of piles and then to be cured. They feel it a duty and a pleasure to let others know how they, too, may be cured.

Rev. Frank N. Bowes, Methodist Minister, Priceville, Ont., writes: "In the winter of 1912 I was stationed in Cobalt. I went for a snowshoe tramp one day, and sat for only a few minutes on a cold stump waiting for some comrades to catch up to me. From sitting on the damp stump I contracted piles, and suffered so severely that it caused me great pain to walk. A friend recommended Dr. Chase's Ointment, and I immediately purchased a small box, which very rapidly effected a cure. I always keep a box on hand and find it excellent for any kind of wound or sore."

Mr. W. B. Thorne, J.P., Alderside, Alta., writes: "It was twenty-eight years ago that I became acquainted with the merits of Dr. Chase's Ointment and would not be without it on any account, as it never fails to do its work. I was first induced to try it for piles. Less than one box cured me, and I have never been troubled since. That was twenty-eight years ago, so I think the cure is permanent. It is good for sore lips and hands, chafing and, in fact, all sorts of sores. You are at liberty to use this statement for the benefit of others."

You can put Dr. Chase's Ointment to the test in any case of piles with the utmost assurance that you will obtain relief from suffering and ultimately lasting cure. 80 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Look for the portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M.D., the famous Receipt Book author, on the box you buy.

The edges of a voile tunic will have the proper weight to make it hang well if it is trimmed with bead embroidery.
