Useful Mrs. Biggus.
A traveling preacher says that during his stay in a certain little town he had rather a curious experience while boarding, or, rather, visiting roundly. On my first visit I explained that I did not drink coffee. The next time my hostess remarked, "You don't drink coffee, I believe?"

"No," said I, "I do not."
On my third visit, this time to another house, there came the same question and answer. Again and again it happened on five or six different sojourns. Then I grew curious, and when my hostess remarked that I did not drink coffee I said:

"No, I do not, but may I ask you told you?"

"Mrs. Biggus," was the reply. "Who is Mrs. Biggus?"

"Well, she is the only woman in this town whom we can secure for domestic service. Everybody who has entertained you has had her while you were there. She knows what you like and has told us all."—Youth's Companion.

JINGLES AND JESTS.
His Finish.
With low bowed head the editor sat
In his easy office chair.
A troubled look was on his face,
His brow was lined with care.

His great brain throbbled, his breath came fast,
He heaved him sigh on sigh;
He clinched his hand and bit his lip
And stifled a soul wrung cry.

On his desk a sheet of paper lay,
The source of his bitter woe,
And it caused him torture as keen and great
As mortal may ever know.

For on that daintily scented sheet
He saw a rhyme had penned;
And had asked him please to publish it;
Poor man! He saw the end!

If he sent it back with thanks, he knew
His offer she'd surely spurn;
If he published it—ye gods, ye gods!
His subscribers would ne'er return.
