THE PRESS AND THE PARTY.

The Secretary of State, Hon. Charles Murphy, had something to say at the meeting of the Ontario Reform Asso ciation yesterday about the relations of the press and the party. His remarks were prompted by the attack of the Toronto Globe upon his department for granting a race-track charter which the Globe alleges is intended to cover widespread gambling operations, and further intrench the betting

Mr. Murphy's version of the incident, and the reply of the Globe representative, show that there are two sides to the case. The charter was granted by the department of state upon the advice of the department of justice that it was for a lawful purpose, and could not be refused. The Globe, on the other hand, had on a previous occasion opposed an arplication for a similar charter, and a Conservative government had refused it. The Globe pleads that it could not consistently refuse to condemn the granting of such a charter by its party friends, in view of its attitude when the fate of a similar application was in the hands of its party opponents. If the law left the department of state no alternative, the law, and not the department, should be the object of attack. Mr. Murphy declares that he is in sympathy with the movement to banish race-track gambling. The amendment of the criminal code seems to be the remedy for the evil and Mr. Murphy and the Globe

it sees fit to conduct itself," covers the whole ground. Mr. Murphy rightly | 000. says that a newspaper pretending to be Liberal in spirit and sympathy should make certain of its facts before it attacks a department, but the same duty rests upon a newspaper opposed to the party in power. A newspaper would be untrue to itself | tions may agree to limit their armaand its readers if it could be disciplined by any government or party organization. The more unfettered the relations between the press and the party are in a panic of mutual suspicions the better for both. The press can be of little service to the party if it is a mere echo of the party leaders; and the party leaders will be more likely to walk circumspectly if they know that their newspaper friends are can-

Ontario now holds the position of the leading ship-owning and shipbuilding province of Canada. According to a statement recently issued by gallant sailor is naturally more likely the department of marine, this province exceeds Nova Scotia in number of vessels. At the close of last year the number and tonnage of craft on the Canadian registry stood as follows:

The new building during the year totalled 304 vessels of 28,983 tons. Of these 46 vessels of 8,695 tons measurement are credited to Ontario; 62 vessels of 7,297 tons to Quebec; to Nova Scotia, 80 of 6,600 tons; to British Columbia, 76 of 4,778 tons, and to New Brunswick 32 of 1,288 tons. The average size of Canadian vessels is a little over 90 tons, as compared with an average of 1,600 tons shown by ships on the register of the United Kingdem, The Montreal Gazette explains that the difference is in part due to the different systems pursued in the two countries. The Canadian register includes besides sea-go-Ing mercantile ships, dredges and fishing boats down to twelve tons measurement. Scotia and New Brunswick, whose ided, then neither is longer necessary barges and sailing ships used to be known in all quarters of the globe, now build hardly anything but fishing schooners running about eighty tons measurement. It is to these circumstances and the development of the trade of the great lakes that is due the fact that Ontario has forged to the front.

The figures of the report represent an increase of 74 vessels and 3,636 tons over 1907.

[Montreal Witness.] Is it wise for British orators to use the phrase supremacy of the British navy on which Lord Charles Beresford rings the changes till it palls? If we alk of providing for the safety British commerce, there is nothing in the idea that can grate on the susceptibilities of other nations unless it that it recalls the fact that British ly samples of Gourlay and McMellan C commerce is practically supreme, fact due to her monopoly of commercial freedom. But when we talk of ruling the seas and of our naval supremacy we are holding out a taunt and a challenge to the whole world, and to every nation in it, big and small. We have no right to command the seas. We have no moral claim to supremacy. The fact of it is intolerable enough to be undesirable-a thing to be looked upon at best as a necessary evil, to be superseded as soon as possible by more social conditions. Let us talk as we will about protecting our trade routes, and making our shores inviolable. Such words contain no menace and no challenge, but this 'I'm the king of the castle' cry has a nasty sound to it if our object really is as we constantly profess it to be,
