terest the letters to your Mail-Box. and notice to our satisfaction that the writers are getting beyond such trifling subjects as kissing, length of skirts and iting. We have read many interesting etters touching on the present war. One cannot help but notice the narrow-mindedness of the majority of people regarding enlisting. They either entirely uphold the soldier and look down on the civilian, or vice-versa. They ing, or sliced in vinegar, and stuffed do not seem to realize that there are eggs. To make the latter, boil the eggs good and bad in both. No doubt there hard, remove shell and cut in half have enlisted because they feel it their crosswise. Scoop out the yolks and mix duty, and feel that they are doing something for those at home, and we should rightly be proud of them. Then season; mash into a paste and return realize what war means, who are goagain to the whites. Each half may be ing for the soldier's life and what they

be allowed to express it these days, Dear Miss Grey,—We read with much and perhaps those civilians who have not offered themselves feel that they would rather be called slackers or cowards than to endure the remorse of killing a fellow-man who may be as innocent in this great struggle as any Canadian. We must not forget that all men are brothers, and the Germans are forced to fight. The British are fighting for justice and right, but when we think of the grafting, etc., that is going on, we cannot entirely blame the man who hesitates; even if authough some men rob their country while pretending loyalty and service, others may serve it honestly and rightly. We honor the man who dies for his untry, and we honor the man who stays at home and tills the soil, alby Sylvia Pankhurst and others. Now, Miss Grey, do not think are pro-German, but we cannot help out feel that every man knows his own ircumstances best, and can better idge what he should do.
