THE PRINCESS OF WALES.

Old Seetch Woman.

One day last autumn an old woman, while busily engaged in picking up firewood in the woods adjoining Mar Lodge, became aware of a lady, quite young, as she thought, beckoning her to approach. With true Scottish indifference she, however, hesitated to do so, for "I jist thocht it would be the Duchess o' Fite," the old lady exclaimed, "and I was thinking she micht as weel come to me as I to her." This, indeed, the young lady—who, as it happened, was not the duchess, but the Princess of Wales herself—soon did. Her royal highness was the first to commence the conversation by the somewhat characteristic inqury.

"Do you think I look like a grand-mother?" "Deed no; I thocht ye was her," was the old woman's reply, point-Old Scotch Woman.

mother?" "Deed no; I thocht ye was her," was the old woman's reply, pointing to the Duchess of Fife, who at that moment joined her mother. The princess, smiling at this artless tribute to her still wonderfully youthful appearance, after a little further conversation took out her purse and offered a piece of silver to the old woman. This was gladly accepted, for Mrs. McB., although widely known in Braemar as a gladly accepted, for Mrs. Ecc., although widely known in Braemar as a decent old body, is not abundantly blessed with this world's goods. But, alas, when she essayed to put away the coin, the pocket, which proved refractory, as pockets will, had twisted round somehow, and in fact could not be found. With charming courtesy the princess assisted her humble acquaintance to find it, and then lifted the bundle of sticks which had been placed for the moment on the ground, on to the old woman's on the ground, on to the old woman's shoulders, and with a cheery "Goodday," accompanied by a bright nod and a smile, left her. Perhaps the best part of this well authenticated story was the remark of the old lady, wno, by the way, was not in the least overcome by the condescension of royalty: "The princess was real helpful and bonnie like."

Scott's Great-Granddaughter.

No one takes more pride in Abbottsford than its present owner, Sir Walter Scott's great-granddaughter. Sir Walter's daughter, Sophia, married John Lockhar't, and had three children, the youngest of whom, Charlotte, married James Hope, who, by Act of Parliament, assumed the name of Hope-Scott.
Their daughter, Mary Monica, inherited Abbotsford. To this interesting girl all England looked to perpetuate a famous name. Of much personal beauty and distinction, she met with a warm welcome from society. When presented at court by her aunt, the Duchess of Buccleuch, Queen Victoria was quick to appreciate the interest and charm of the young de butante. She kissed her on both cheeks before the astonished court, exclaiming, No one takes more pride in Ab butante. She kissed her on both cheeks before the astonished court, exclaiming, "This is all we have left of Sir Walter." In 1874 Miss Hope-Scott married the Hon. Joseph Maxwell, who assumed the name of Scott, and when the oldest of their seven children was born, he was named Walter Scott, amid great raiseing. Upon this appreciate occasion. rejoicing. Upon this auspicious occasion the Queen telegraphed her congratulations, with the message, "He shall be knighted when he is 21." The shall be knighted when he is 21." The power of heredity is apparent in Mrs. Maxwell Scott's resemblance to her illustrious greatgrandfather. The familiar drooping blue eyes of Sir Walter look out from beneath a wide, full brow, so like that of Chantry's head of the great novelist that it might have served as a model. Notwithstanding the personal oversight which Mrs. Maxwell Scottgives her children and the social degives her children and the social de-mands upon her time and strength, this active woman makes a point of knowing personally every tenant on her large estates. She finds time, as well, for an outlet for her literary tastes, having edited the last the best of Sir ing edited the last the best of Sir Walter's "Diary," which Lockhart greatly abridged, suppressing nothing from the orignal, and adding many interesting notes of her own. English periodicals constantly published able articles by Mrs. Maxwell Scott.—New York Herald.

Owing to the severe iliness of Ald. Shaw the Avenue-road matter was again postthe Avenue-road poned yesterday.

R. Simpson's Friday Bargains GETTING READY FOR THE NEW SEVEN-STORY STORE. WONDERFUL BARGAINS.

S.W. Cor. Yonge & Queen-sts. THERE seems to be little doubt but that we will be in occupation of our new seven-ator, building before another Bargain Friday comes around. This means that there is much labor ahead of us in the rearrangement of departments and removal of scocks from one section premises to the other. We expect to lighten this labor by a tremendously busy Bargain Friday, reducing in a marked degree the volume of stocks at present on hand. Come Friday and you will see what this means. Come early for your own convenience.

The business in corn has been a good deal larger than for some days past. While the cash and December option is depressed and lower, May is strong. The country appear to have again become country appear to have again become buyers of it. We believe in higher-price corn on this crop, but present receipts a too heavy to admit of much, if an too heavy to admit of much, if an advance.

Provisions opened strong and higher, the late sellers yesterday being the prominent buyers. The best authorities at the yards predicted a marked falling off in the hog receipts; that of itself should warrant higher prices.

Cables were rather firm and there was some talk of dry weather prevailing in the winter. were rather firm and there was some talk of dry weather prevailing in the winter wheat belt. There was some covering by shorts, owing to the coming holiday. Exports were not large, but it is accounted for by the scarcity of freight room. May, wheat opened at 59 3-8c, sold to 60 1-8c, and closed at 59 7-8c bid. Northwest resists executive. Blood and closed at 59 7-8c bid. Northwest resceipts continue liberal.

Corn shorts were started to covering to-day, advancing prices half a cent and closing them strong. Receipts were large. Low grades were weak. The upturn was started by liberal buying through brokers by a bull commission house. When shorts came to cover they found the May offerings scarce. There is some talk of a smaller country, movement. some talk of a smaller country, movement. That, however, will probably depend on the weather. The cash situation is not Provisions ralled from yesterday's closing break, and ruled dull but fairly steady. Packers were still the sellers, situation, which still favors lower prices.
