OULD TAUELED ZAMENDER WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 29th, 1893. —THE election which took place on the 22xd instant to fill the seat in the House of Commons made vacant by the resignation of Hugh John McDonald, one of the members for the city of Winnipeg, seems to have taken thibbrals dare hope for was that their candi date, Hon. Joseph Martin, might pult through by a narrow majority. conclusion, seeing how closely all the western provinces of the dominion have supported the party now in power. The election of the liberal candidate, therefore, with the unusually large majority of 435 has proved genuine surprise all over the dominion. There are of course local causes which to a greater or less extent enter into every contest and influence more or less the result. But such a sweeping victory would seem to point pretty clearly to two things: first, that the people of Manitoba, and the Northwest as well, desire certain radical reforms in the tariff, and that they will stand on nonsense on the Manitoba school question. Hon. Joseph Martin was the attorney general in the government which introduced the bill abolishing separate schools, and, indeed, himself drew up that famous measure.
