

change of views may come in matters political, social and educational, measures calculated to promote the well-being of the people and the prosperity of the land which all sound Canadians delight to call their own. In Canadian politics the facts are given freely and fairly, as they present themselves. All sides are accorded an equal opportunity to be heard.

The reports of public gatherings are prepared without partizanship, and no comment of any kind is admitted to the record of the speeches in Parliament. The Mail and Empire aims to give, daily, an exact photograph of the proceedings in the great gathering of the nation, that its readers irrespective of politics, may be as well informed, touching the transactions there as if they were personally present.

The other features of the paper are equally complete.
