

endurance. What seems more intolerable is to see men get sick. I had a case of meningitis yesterday and another to-day. One of them did that long night trick, carrying the whole equipment without complaint, and collapsed at the finish. He is going to die.

"I must close this long letter. Remember me to all the boys. I am feeling fine, never better in my life, and am so content to be here. Would not be out of it for anything. I don't think that any one of us, who come through whole, will think from our armchairs unkindly of poor, bloody, mutilated old Flanders."
