How to Beautify a Weatherbeaten Face

(From Beauty and Health). It's really a simple matter to renovate a face soiled by dist, wind or cold. Ordinary mercolized wax, used like cold cream, will transform the worst cold cream, will transform the worst old complexion into one of snowy whitness and velvety softness. It literally peels off the outer veil of surface skin, but so gently, gradually, there's no discomfort. The wornout skin comes off, not in patches, but evenly, in tiny particles, leaving no evidence of the treatment. The younger, healthier underskin forming the new complexion is one of captivating loveliness. One ounce of mercolized wax, to be had at any drug store, is enough to remove any coarse, chapped, enough to remove any coarse, chapped, inferred that this is due to the protec-pimpled, freckled, faded or sallow skin. tive effect of unconscious inoculation Apply before retiring, washing it off with the tubercle bacillus in mild form.

Many skins wrinkle easily with every wind that blows, with heat, worry, etc. An excellent wrinkle-remover, because it tightens the skin and strengthens relaxed muscles, is a wash lotion made as follows: Powdered saxolite, I oz., dissolved in witch hazel, one half pint. A novel decorative scheme is being worked out in Paris by Montford Coolidge, the New York artist, who recently it returned to the French capital after a long stay in Italy. According to a Paris correspondent of The New York Times, h. Mr. Coolidge has shown privately to a few friends a specimen of his work, this being the panel of a room he is painting for an Italian nobleman, showing land, scapes of Southern Europe as seen from an acroplane.

It is stated that the celling of the room will be colored to resemble the sky, while in the middle of the floor will be set a large panel of glass. Some distance below the glass and lighted electrically from the sides will be fixed a painting resembling the Italian Alps as they would appear if seen from an immense height. The illusion of flying in an acroplane.

This remarkable scheme has, it is asserted, sound artistic principles. Mr. Coolidge explains that the painting being below the level of the eye, it can be enjoyed in comfort while listening to the music, but a decorated celling is far too in the room, which will be used for musical entertainments.

Mr. Coolidge asserts that this idea is a development of the methods of the Romans, who adorned their floors as well as their walls with mosaics. The room which is thus being decorated is in the villa of Count Gabbi, a young and ardent aviator at Rimini, Italy.

INOCULATION FOR TUBERCUcommon cricket and the grasshopper are considered excellent singers.

The singers are collected from the fields in September, before laying-time. They are taken from the grass and shut up in glass jars. Soon after they are imprisoned the female lay their eggs and die almost immediately afterwards. The male is the singer; he only is an object of commerce, and from 100 eggs the cultivator, despite all his care, has only 50 salable insects. Thus, the common-sense remedy is that which will restore to your body the very elements of which it is composed, and thus assist Nature directly in her work of reconstruction. Sanguinol is just such a remedy. Built upon strictly scientific principles, it is composed of the manganess and iron of which the lire-giving red blood corpuscles are made, and the phosphates of which our nervous system is built.

So, when you find that you have asked too much of Nature, and you want a new lease of life—the eager desire of so many countless sufferers from nervous exhaustion, impoverished digestion and weak blood—then you need an assistant to Nature. graph. He gave a series of Wagner selections all in the finest style. An absolutely perfect rendering of the "Lohengrin" Vorspiel was typical of all the others. The orchestra realized once the composer's vision of the Holy Grail when the divine harmonies descend and are mingled with the un-dertones of earth until the fulness of perfection is achieved and the divine reascends to its own celestial abode. The "R!enzi" overture, with its brazen climaxes in the master's earlier manner, magnificently rendered: turesque in tone color; the Good Friday Spell from "Parsifal," in which Alexander Saslavsky took the violin solo with satisfying sweetness sympathetic power; the prelude and finale to "Tristan," with wonderful double bass effects and extraordinary delicacy in extreme pianissimos; and the "Meistersinger" prelude, a worthy climax to the concert with its wealth of tonal embroidery, formed a feast fit for the heavenly nine themselves. Last night's audience repeatedly recalled Mr. Damrosch. Mr. Saslavsky had to bow his acknowledgments. Dr. Ham was brought out again and again. But there were no encores. Tonight's program offers another musical treat.

WORD COMES FROM FIVE LANGUAGES

The most hybrid word in the English language, according to Prof. A. F. Chamberlain of the Clark University, is "macadamizing." He points out is "macadamizing." He points out that this word is derived from five languages—Latin, Gaelic, Hebrew, Greek and English—and he revolves into five factors, says The Popular Science Monthly, as follows:

"Re"—a Latin prefix, signifying a repetition or doing over again;
"Mac," a Gaelic word for son, in common use as a prefix for genealogical purposes;
"Adam," the representative in many

European languages for the Hebrew name of the first man, according to the Mosaic account of the creation, as given in the book of Genesis; "Iz" (or ize), the modern English representative, thru the French, iser, of the Greek verbal terminal izein; "Ing," the English suffix of the participle present, verbal noun, etc.
The root of this word "macadam" illustrates in another way the vitality of our English speech and its ability to draw new words into its vocabulary whenever the need arises. The term "macadam" is really the family name of the man, John Macadam, who early in the last century devised the now common method of paving roads with small broken stones, etc.

Celtic and Semitic had already combined to produce Macadam, meaning "son of Adam," which the English language then took up and further molded to suit its genius. There are many such hybrids, but this is pro bly the worst.
