Approaching Orientals

When fine antique examples are considered, the Oriental Rug is, without question, the acme of perfection. But the scarcity of these good pieces has led Oriental makers to "doctor" poor modern examples in a vain effort to get an antique appearance.

To offset the bad effect of these unworthy rugs, one manufacturer in the States has developed the art of rug making to a point where it rivals the good Orientals in firmness of weave, lasting color and æsthetic value. He has reproduced the classic rugs of antiquity.

The wools from which these machine-made Orientals are woven are imported from the Orient. That peculiar strain known as The Fat-Tailed Sheep, native to the mountains, desert lands and barren hills of Asia Minor, produces a class of wool which combines the essential qualities of strength, firmness, resiliency and brilliancy so necessary to successful rug-making.

Come to the fourth floor, take a chair beside a pile of these rugs, and have turned over for you a couple of dozen of the highest class floor coverings that have ever been shown in Toronto. You'll want to make space for one of them in your house, that's sure.

SARABANDS—This is one of the most easily identified of Oriental designs. It is the old Persian pear pattern, generally on a red or blue ground, hundreds of the little "pear" figures arranged with geowith fine floral figures and undulating vines interspersed with a conventional flower. All these beauties of detail and design are found in our machine-made Sarabands.

THE GOREVAN—is woven in the old Persian province of Aberbaijan. The women weavers of this district have long been famous for their skill.

The distinguishing features of the Gorevan is a bold medallion on a deep, rich ground of red, blue or ivory. Odd geometrical figures fill in the balance of the body of the rug. The corner pieces are singularly beautiful and harmonious. Our machine-made Gorevans have all the color and design of the costly originals from which they

Upholstered Fabrics

Copied From Antique Hand-Made Tapestries In this season's Upholstery Fabrics there are many novelties. Reproduction of antique hand made tapestries are particularly interesting; not only the design but the time softened colorings are faithfully reproduced; the Persian designs are unique. 50 inches wide. Per yard $2.00.

Brocades and Brocatelles, in the characteristic all-over designs, but in ne shades; particularly a pleasing amber, and a beautiful shade of mulberry, 50 inch wide. Per yard $2.50 to $4.50.

The old-fashioned Heavy Silk Repp, in both dainty and strong colorings, with the cord emphasized, is both decorative and useful. Per yard $1.50 to $2.50.

French Silk Damask, with jasper grounds, with embroidered lattice design, in metal, is decidedly new, and the several colorings are beautifully soft and attraction.

A novel and pleasing effect is produced in one line by the Renaissance lace design, in ivory over a jasper silk ground, in delicate shades of blue and green.

50 inches wide. Per yard $2.50.
