be left free for private engagements. Sail Round Water Front.
On Wednesday morning the harbor commissioners will take the entire party for a sail around the water front, following which a luncheon will be given at the Royal Canadian Yacht Club.

The visiting newspapermen will return to Toronto on Wednesday, September 5, to see the world's greatest exhibition. They are due to arrive at the Exhibition grounds at 8.30 a.m. when the directors will entertain them to breakfast and subsequently to lunch.

A large number of overseas delegates are proprietorial rather than working journalists in the ordinary acceptance of the term, but no doubt they will do their share in the business end of the conference.

Much has been said and written about Lord Burnham, president of the Empire Press Union, and proprietor of The London Daily Telegraph, who is the greatest of the British journalists.

Lord Apsley represents the big interests of The London Morning Post, which is the fashionable society daily of the metropolis. It also wields some political influence.

Robert Donald, chairman of the Empire Press Union, who owns The Yorkshire Observer, published in Bradford, was formerly editor of The London Daily Chronicle, with the proprietors of which, it was said, he had some disagreement over the policy of the paper.

H. T. Cadbury, a member of the famous Quaker family, perhaps better known to drinkers of cocoa, represents the proprietors of The London Daily News, famous in having Charles Dickens as its first editor.

C. D. Leng, one of the proprietors of The Sheffield Telegraph, is the son of Sir W. C. Leng, who was one of the greatest and most fearless writers the Midlands have ever produced.

Two miles from the corner of Bloor and Yonge streets, and thirty minutes by street car to King and Yonge streets. Adjoins the beautiful residential section surrounding Grace Church, on Russel Hill Road—a few hundred yards beyond the residence of Mr. R. J. Fleming, corner of St. Clair Avenue and Bathurst Street.

WHERE THE LIQUOR GOES

Drury Inspectors: Now, Mr. Farmer, what did you do with the ten cases of whiskey you got in by express two days ago?

The innocent farmer? I declare to the good Lord, mister, that a gang of motor raiders held me up and my horse with guns last night, gagged the wife, and raced off with every bottle. Constable: Did they ever do it before? Innocent Farmer: By gosh, mister, this is the fifth time.

case, Atholstan's lordship would have ceased with his earthly activities, his family only consisting of a daughter. Lord Atholstan's honors are said to be "for services rendered to journalism," but no doubt the great fight his started, credit could not be obtained for paper and ink. It is now reputedly the best paying newspaper proposition in Canada.

Charles F. Crandall, secretary to the committee, is one of Lord Atholstan's "discoveries." He and the peer are about the same stature, but Charlie has probably more dynamic force than his chief. He is a fine, all-round newspaperman, with plenty of executive ability, and has made good in what is regarded as one of the journalistic plums of the Dominion—editor-in-chief of The Montreal Star.

Percy Hurd, M.P., also belongs to the Atholstan family, being the London representative of that paper, and known under the nom de plume of Windermere, or as his friends frequently facetiously observe, "mere wind." He is also connected with The Canadian Gazette, which is published in London. Percy is a wonderfully well-informed man, writes on a variety of subjects, but has particularism in particular, and enjoys the confidence of many of the really big men on the other side. He is a brother of Archibald Hurd, the famous naval critic and authority.

South Africa, India, Newfoundland, West Indies, Ceylon, Egypt, Straits Settlements, Malia and Hongkong are also represented at this essentially cosmopolitan press conference.

George A. Isaacs, general secretary of the Society of Operative Printers of Great Britain, worthily represents labor, and made a remarkable speech at a dinner given in Quebec on Sunday night. Literature is presumably represented by Foster, the well-known Canadian novelist.

Canadian Peer is Chairman. Lord Atholstan, chairman of the Canadian reception committee, is the proprietor of The Montreal Star, and will be remembered by most people as plain Hugh Graham. He was knighted before the former faded thru the activities of W. F. Nichol, an afternoon residence—as long as "my comrades are held criminals and convicts." This statement was made by Debs in a letter written to a "comrade" here today.

Hobbs and young Snobbs contracted to plant a field of corn for $5. Hobbs, who could plant a row of corn in 20 minutes, could plant two rows while young Snobbs covered one; but Snobbs could plant three rows while Hobbs covered two. The puzzle is to show how they both worked eight hours and earned the same amount of money.

JUDITH OF BLUE LAKE RANCH

By JACKSON GREGORY.

CHAPTER XIX. BUD LEE BEERS CROOKED CHRIS QUINNION.

Going down the knoll to the bunk-house, Bud Lee cursed himself at every stride. He cursed Carson when the cattle foreman, turning to follow him, addressed a merry remark to him concerning his "lady-killing clothes."

"A feller called you up a while ago," said Carson, still bright-eyed with interest, but pretending that that interest had to do with the new wall telephone recently installed. "Sandy Weaver, it was. Said 'what's sating you, Bud? You ac' mighty suspicious, like a man that had swallowed poison or else was coming down with the yellow jaundice, or else was took sudden an' powerful bad with love. They all treats a man similar."

"Damn it," growled Lee irritably, "can't you tell me what Weaver said? He said call him up, real pronto, re-plied Carson cheerfully. "Say, Bud, where in heck did you get that outfit? By cripes, if I had a reg'lar like that I'd be riding herd in any 'vry Sunday! On the square now—"

"But Lee wasn't listening to him and Carson knew it. He had gone quickly to the telephone, had rung the one bell for "Central," and a moment later was speaking with Sandy Weaver of the Golden Spur saloon. Carson eeked at his pipe and kept his eyes on Lee's face.

The ensuing conversation, only one side of which came to Carson, was brief. Most of the talking was done by Sandy Weaver. Lee asked three questions; the third a simple, "Sure of it, Sandy?"

Then he jammed the receiver back upon its hook, and with no remark continued his hurried dressing. When he had come in his face had been flushed; now it was suddenly red, the hot red of rage. His eyes, when they met Carson's once, were stern bright with the same quick anger.

"Riding, Bud?" He got to his feet, stuffed his pipe into his pocket and reached for his hat. "Care if I mosey along?"

"What for?" asked Lee curtly. "Oh, hell, what's the use being a hawg," Carson grumbled deep down in his brown throat. "If you're on your way to little ol' Rocky hunting trouble, if they're going to be shooting-uns, why can't you let me in on it?"

Lee stood a moment framed in the doorway, frowning down at Carson. Then he turned on his heel and went out, saying coolly over his shoulder: "Come on if you want to. Quinnion's in town."

As their horse's hoofs hammered the winding road for the forty miles into Rocky Bend the two riders were for the most part silent. All of the explanation which Lee had to give, or brief words, "Quinnion's in town."
