ME LUD NORTHCLIFFE

It is not yet too late for Lord Northcliffe to have himself interviewed on such subjects as he may inadvertently have overlooked. Naturally he is a busy man. It is no light task to conduct a group of newspapers and operate pulp and paper mills to supply them with raw material. When to this is added a general oversight of the relations between Britain and Germany, and the task of advisor-in-chief to the British empire, the pressure upon his lordship's time must of necessity be somewhat heavy. It may therefore be regarded as a fortunate thing for Canada that he has devoted even a passing glance to the government railway system of this country. Lord Northcliffe is not burdened by local prejudices, or by political considerations. He is simply a great man. Hence he can tell you off-hand everything about anything or all about everything. Wisdom exudes, as it were, from his person. When he criticises the Intercolonial Railway, there is nothing for it but to tell the road to a company, or leave it to the patriots lately discovered in the neighborhood of the Halifax Chronicle and St. John Sun. It is useless to go on permitting blundering statesmen and boards of management to bedevil the road and the region which it traverses. Since Lord Northcliffe cannot tackle the job himself, being shortly needed at home to ward off a German invasion, he has at least indicated the course which should be pursued. Being himself a journalist, he knows the capacity of journalists, and there can be little doubt that if he should speak with more definiteness it would be to instruct Hon. Mr. Graham to appoint a commission of newspaper men to run the Intercolonial, with head offices both in Halifax and St. John. Then definite would disappear, the hemlock would give place to the orchard, loving vine would replace the mouse, the she-bear would seek the Maine woods in order that lambs might fatten in peace, towns and factories would spring up, immigrants would pour in from the shores of all the seas. And whenever Lord Northcliffe came this way he would receive a fresh bouquet at every station, with hand music at all the towns and villages. Surely this is a glorious outlook. It was good of his lordship to speak the magic words that conjure up so enchanting a vision. Had he not come, we might have gone on believing what other visitors tell us—that the I. C. R. is one of the best-equipped railways on the continent.

RICH ONTARIO

The field crops of Ontario for the year 1908 were valued at $164,077,282, and the value of live stock in the province on July 1st of that year $188,014,736. These are remarkable figures and indicate the flourishing agricultural condition of Ontario.

The annual report of the Bureau of Industries gives the following statement of field crops for 1908:—

Hay and clover	447,696,579
Oats	38,987,985
Wheat	1,649,901
Barley	10,943,788
Corn (for husking)	8,440,338
Potatoes	8,847,201
Mixed grains	8,444,893
Peas	6,121,449
Corn (for silo)	5,458,439
Turnips	4,121,019
Mangel-wurzel	2,389,877
Spring wheat	1,996,230
Buckwheat	1,799,330
Beans	1,190,103
Rye	1,012,933
Sugar beets	844,570
Carrots	140,018

The acreage devoted to other crops was:—Orchard and small fruits, 326,550; vineyards, 11,705; pasture, 3,326,160; rape, 40,208; flax, 8,502; hops, 1,772; tobacco, 1,808 acres.

The value of live stock on July 1st, 1908, was as follows:—

Horses	885,947,391
Milk cows	41,083,386
Other cattle	36,171,081
Pigs	12,135,979
Sheep and lambs	6,338,285
Poultry	4,439,884

They do not speak idly who boast of the agricultural wealth of the great province of Ontario.

It is announced from Ottawa that the government will secure the loan of two British cruisers for training ships for officers and seamen. Trained men should be ready when the first vessels of the new fleet are completed.

WHAT IT MAY MEAN

The New York Journal of Commerce regards as of national significance the result of the recent state elections in Massachusetts, where Mr. Eugene Foss, a tariff-reform Republican, accepted the Democratic nomination and nearly won the victory. Reviewing the contest the Journal of Commerce says:

"The advanced position Massachusetts Republicans are taking has special significance on account of the character of the industries and commercial interests of the state. It got free hides, which was one of the leading demands, and it is engaged more largely than any other state in cotton and woolen manufactures, which are supposed to be special beneficiaries of protection. Mr. Foss himself is largely interested in cotton manufactures, but he realizes the growing importance of foreign markets and of ability to compete in them. He is in favor of untaxed materials and liberal reciprocity arrangements, especially with Canada. In short, he represents distinctly the tariff reform wing of the Republicans in Massachusetts, and was willing to accept a place on the Democratic ticket as a warning of what such Republicans may be driven to. The old Bay State has led in various historic reform movements in the past and the tendency among her people, where education is universal and illiteracy disqualifies for the suffrage, is of more than ordinary significance."

SHEEP RAISING

Those farmers in New Brunswick who are giving more attention to sheep-raising, and who hold that the government of the province should do something to encourage the industry, will be interested in the following statement of what is being done in Ontario. We quote from the Toronto Telegram:—

"The revival of the sheep industry in Ontario, which has been steadily declining, is being attempted by the department of agriculture. The method chosen is the establishment of illustration stations in eight counties of the province. One has been already begun by Wm. Little, near Agincourt, York county, for early lambs, which will be sold in the open market in Toronto. Another station is being arranged in Muskoka for summer lambs. Six more for winter-fel lambs will be started in Leeds, Simcoe, Huron, Middlesex, Brant and Victoria counties. The object of the department is to show that there is a good profit in sheep raising to the ordinary farmer, and with the ordinary grade of sheep. The farmers being chosen are not experts. They supply their own stock-grade ewes and keep account of the cost, the time spent, the revenue, etc., and for this labor are allowed a slight remuneration. The results of their experiments will be made known by the department on the expiration of their term in 1912, which will allow for the produce of two full years. The sheep are first inspected, so as to prevent any other than the ordinary grades being used. The farms will be open to anyone during this period, and information will be freely given by the farmer in charge."

The Socialist and Labor candidates lost ground in the recent municipal elections in England.

The Young Men's Liberal Club is a decidedly vigorous organization, and it does well to keep the members together.

A trained nurse to visit persons suffering from tuberculosis would do much to improve conditions, and the appeal for funds should be promptly met.

The sportsman who complains of a scarcity of moose on the Miramichi should come to St. John, ride out a few miles into the country, and get one.

Canada's record for the fiscal year is expected to make a new high record. The country is again on the highway of prosperity, after a brief depression, and 1910 will be the banner year.

The by-election campaign in Quebec province is waxing warm. Charges of the most outrageous nature are becoming common.

An Ontario Conservative paper has discovered great political virtues in Hon. Mr. Foster. Is there to be a Foster boom as well as a McBride boom for the leadership?

The marine department will hold a public enquiry into the cause of the wreck of the Hestia. There is no disposition on the part of the government to conceal any facts in relation to the safeguards of navigation at the entrance to the Bay of Fundy.

If there is any truth in the Berlin cable to the effect that an Anglo-German understanding is under consideration by the German government, Lord Northcliffe will be able to give more attention to the Intercolonial Railway.

Another industrial enterprise is seeking concessions from the city. It is not so long since the city was vainly seeking to interest investors in the opportunities offered here. That there has been a change is due to those citizens who refused to be influenced by the wail of the pessimist or the carping criticism of a portion of the press.

Parson Johnstun—Well, Jerry, we rich men will have a hard time getting into Heaven.

Eira—Yes, but but but don't help the poor man now.

AH, SWEET IS TIPPERARY

By Denis A. McCarthy.
Ah, sweet is Tipperary in the springtime of the year,
When the hawthorn's whiter than the snow,
With their singing and their winging to and fro,
When gently sleeve-na-moon puts her verdant venture on,
And smiles to hear the news the breezes bring,
When the sun begins to glance on the rivulets that dance in the spring!

Ah, sweet Tipperary in the springtime of the year,
When the Golden Vale is smiling with a beauty all beaming the joy of the land,
And the sun goes crooning to the sea,
When the shadow and the shivers only multiply the flowers,
That the lavish hand of May will fling; when in unfrequented ways, fair music softly plays,
Ah, sweet is Tipperary in the spring!

Ah, sweet is Tipperary in the springtime of the year,
When life like the year is young,
When the soul is just awaking like a lily blossom breaking the green of the land,
And love words linger on the tongue; when the soft and tender and the Irish eyes,
And love dream and clasp and cling round the heart and round the brain, half of pleasure, half of pain—
Ah, sweet is Tipperary in the spring!

IN LIGHTER VEIN

ONCE MORE.

Oh the football squad is tooting,
And the freshmen's here once more,
Who'll be the boys and girls,
And his yearnings after girls,
The girl with college colors,
On the chaplain has the call,
Christians are blossoming—
Signs infallible of fall.

HOTEL ETIQUETTE.

"We had finished dinner in the little restaurant," said Miss Mary Brown, "and were waiting for dessert, which had been ordered. The red-headed waiter, who had been waiting for us, came in and said, 'We are sorry, but we cannot wait all the afternoon for her.' 'Well, if you was through, she said, 'why didn't you stack up your dishes?'"

DANGEROUS GROUND.

"Gawwies Henry," said the colored dandy in the green waistcoat and white shirt, "did you tell pa dat I was head callin' on yo' sister, Ma'am?"
"She 'Ah did,'" responded the little pickaninny, "on de day of de funeral."

"What's the matter with you?" asked the man in the red coat, "you're looking like a ghost." "I'm not," replied the man in the red coat, "I'm just looking like a ghost." "What's the matter with you?" asked the man in the red coat, "you're looking like a ghost." "I'm not," replied the man in the red coat, "I'm just looking like a ghost."

WHEN SUMMER'S GONE.

The summer's come and gone again,
Just like a picture show,
We thought along the July days
There's a wall now through the trees,
Now here we be, right into fall,
With frosty nights and cold,
The grass down in the meadow's brown,
The hillsides red and gold.

This is the melancholy time,
The year, the poet's cry,
But there is only just before
I feel all passion and love
There is a wall now through the trees,
Where yesterday was a warm sun,
That is the time the limbs are bare,
An' summer's passed along.

You cannot stop the seasons o'er,
They must forever roll,
But you kin keep your heart a-warm,
An' summer in your soul.
Just keep the grasses green inside,
An' don't give up your love,
An' then 'twon't matter very much
At summer's gone also.—Boston Herald.

SUMMER RANDOMS ON KENNEBECASIS BAY

(No. 3)
The man had clambered over rocks, scrambled through bushes, spilled worms, angled patiently, and now, with eight fine trout and one small one, found himself near the shore. He cleaned his trout, spread them on his untanned gridiron, which he had made from an old wire barbecue, built a fire, and placed his gridiron over the coals in a manner great chefs would commend as best fitted to conserve the exquisite flavor of the fish.

He sat down, pulled a volume of Ruskin from his pocket and debated with the author, pending the finish of the cookery. "Well," cried a surprised female voice, "in inopportunist."

With an adaptability admirable to everyone save the victim, they immediately made themselves at home, stirred up the coals, rearranged the gridiron, all the while making caustic remarks on the audaciousness of men's cookery, and allotted the fish to the guests in advance.

"I wish I had your happy way of making yourselves at home in unwelcome places," says the man.
They ignore this remark and coolly proceed with the allotment of the victuals.

"He can't hear the little one," says Red Head, generously.
"I don't know," says Brown Head, meditatively. "Perhaps it would only tantalize him."

"That is it," says the rest. "It would only tantalize him. It's a shame to tantalize a man. He can't hear it. Makes him ugly."

The man gets up with the amiable intention of toasting the whole concern into the air—that is the grid-iron and its contents—but Brown Head, having had a disastrous experience with him on a previous occasion, anticipates the act, takes precautions, and tells him flatly that if he is as low as that he can go away, which advice, being disobeyed by the unhappy party, ending of his morning's sport, he takes and vanishes, but not before his ears catch a dozen remarks on the unendurable naughtiness of sulkiness.

Tom—I think a man should marry a girl he has known from childhood.
Yes—Yes, but if a girl knew a man from childhood she would probably know better than to marry him.

TROUBLE AT WEDDING

(Backview Post.)

Pugwash is deeply interested in an assault case that occurred recently in this town. The assault was the aftermath of a wedding. A crowd of boisterous youths, assembled about the home of the bride and were making themselves generally offensive.

The clergyman who performed the ceremony is an exponent of muscular Christianity and undertook to disperse the crowd. One man claims that he received a violent blow on the jaw from the fist of the minister against whom, when new formation for assault. The case was recently tried before Justice Elliott and damages are much interested in the outcome.
