New Spirit of Co-operation is Extending Its Beneficial Influence

CURED OF HATREDS

Countries See Fighting Only as Gambling Game That Ruins Everybody

EDITOR'S NOTE:—J. W. T. Mason has just completed a two-months' tour of the principal nations of Europe. During his trip he conferred with leaders in England, France, Germany and Italy. He has had unexampled opportunities for observing the trend of affairs in Europe since the turning point of the Locarno Treaties. In this article he sums up the conclusions he reached during his tour.

co-operation and mutual forebearance is extending its beneficent influence over an increasing part of Europe. The batreds of the World War, which seemed eternal a short time ago, are being forgotten. Germany is beginning to confess that French enmity may have been deserved, and English men are saying that the war guilt was HATREDS FORGOTTEN. Traveling through the countries of manistic sentiments are abroad such as would have made the Versailles y an entirely different document had they existed at the time of the LOOK peace negotiation. There is no sentimentality in the new spirit of peace. On that respect it differs from the idealism of the millenium movement of the war period.

Europe today is passing into the control of practical men of affairs whose ideals are based on the principle of facing today's problem today and not legislating for the indefinite future.

This is not to say Europe has seen its sending the war gamblers back to the woods, while the doctrine of work and co-operation is now in the ascendant. HELPING SELVES.

The leaders of Europe today in the principal countries—with the possible exception of France—are returning to the principles of Samuel Smiles, "selfhelp." France is a laggard, but the impetus will be felt in Paris eventually.

help." France is a laggard, but the impetus will be felt in Paris eventually. Meanwhile, the contagion of the American spirit of hustle is spreading elsewhere, from Great Britain to the Balkans. Europe wants to get rich again, and Uncle Sam's way of getting rich by sticking close to the job is becoming Europe's way as well.

President Coolidge's frequent explanations of America's desire to help Europe will first help itself have been received with something like outward derision by the Europeans. They have told one another that such proffers of advice where only America's way of dodging her responsibilities to the world. But, now, this mental attitude is changing. America's persistent plea to Europe to start digging has finally had results. Europe is starting in to dig and at the same time is beginning to forget there is a United States.

This is all to the good When Pures.

This is all to the good When Pures.

This is all to the good. When Europeans explain that they are forgetting there is a United States, they mean they are abandoning hope of getting any free financial help from Washing-ton and New York. That is to say, they mean they are saving themselves by their own exertions and are not ex-

may have been deserved, and Englishmen are saying that the war guilt was to a race for economic supremacy.
