VISCOUNT HALDANE AT WEST POINT TODAY

Sees Home Rule Soon and Favors Votes For Women, But is Against Militancy

New York, Aug. 29.—A visit to West Point was foremost today on the programme of Viscount Haldane, Lord High Chancellor of England. After a reception and luncheon at the home of Col. Townley, superintendent of the military academy, and a review of the corps of cadets, Lord Haldane expected to leave on a special train for Albany, the second stopping point on his trip from this city to Montreal.

In Montreal, Lord Haldane will address the American Bar Association on Monday. He plans to return to New York on Tuesday and will sail for home early on Wednesday.

In the first interview given newspapermen since his election, Lord Haldane discussed freely the topics of the day, but balked at giving his opinion as to the outcome of the situation in Mexico. He declared for woman suffrage, but not for the militant methods of socialism. He is, however, a supporter of the Irish cause, and he does not foresee hastening world-wide peace in the near future, and jokingly retorted the opinion that England's great seal, of which he is keeper, was "very safe" in the house of Lords.

Miss Elizabeth Haldane, his sister, and Mrs. Kenneth Muir-Mackenzie, accompanied him.

Mr. Gibson came to St. John about eight years ago as provincial manager of the Imperial Lumber Company, which position he held to the time of his death. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. A. Gibson, and also by a son, Mr. Miles, M. D., Ormococt (N. B.). He is also survived by four children—Grace, Miles, William and Martin, all at home; one sister, Mrs. J. S. T. Bliss, of Dorchester (N. B.), two brothers, Arthur and John, both in the merchant service.

FUR FARMING FOR ENGLAND

(Times' Special Correspondence) London, Aug. 19.—Attracted by the picturesque side of the industry, British landowners are considering if there are not good facilities for fur farming in Canada and in the States. In Sussex a start has already been made and several chinchillas imported from Chili are in captivity.

The experiment is being watched with interest. It is maintained by some authorities, however, that better prospects of success might be expected if Canada's climate were followed, and the commencement of the experiments were limited to the breeding of native animals. On the other hand, there are those who argue that Great Britain was once the home of many of the fur-bearing animals found in Canada and that those species that are extinct or rarely encountered may easily be revived by the importation of viable stock from the Dominion.

Scotland especially, it is estimated, offers similarity in climatic conditions and there are available extensive areas of land on which the industry might be started under favorable conditions.

TURKEY TROT CASE TO THE HIGHEST COURT

Manich, Aug. 29.—At Teitzl, a small health resort, a Berlin merchant and a young woman were arrested for dancing the turkey trot in a public dance hall.

The lower court acquitted the prisoners, but the prosecuting attorney appealed to the district court which found the pair guilty and fined them.

The defendants then appealed to the high court of Bavaria, which confirmed the ruling of the district court, declaring the question to be not whether the turkey trot is forbidden, but whether the two were guilty of disorderly conduct.

POLITICS INTUDE INTO THE SCHEME

Trade Questions And the Earl Grey Project

A Rival Proposition — Lord Strathcona Looks at the Money Side of Plan For Dominion House in London — Trade and the Flag

(Times' Special Correspondence) London, Aug. 19.—Will the Dominion House suggestion of Earl Grey assume a political aspect? It is not improbable. One of the principal virtues of the over-seas scheme is the extension of empire trade and that, of course, is a tenet of the tariff reformers.

We are promised an alternative scheme which has as an important element, the extension of the world trade of the dominions and that it is a plan in the free trade platform. It will be surprising if the champions of these two commercial faiths do not meet and find debatable material in the proposal to erect an edifice to typify the empire. It is usually over questions that the two forces lock horns and express what one side calls empire heresies and the other empire cement.

Strathcona's Views Lord Strathcona, who has always regarded the proposals of Earl Grey for the erection of Dominion House with some misgiving on the score of capital cost and maintenance, has given his views in an interview published in "The Financier."

"The Dominion government have taken no part in the formulation of this scheme, and they have before them a plan for acquiring a site in London, and putting up a building to be devoted to Dominion business, and possibly to the accommodation of the representatives of the Canadian provinces. This would be a purely private undertaking, and regarding Lord Grey's scheme, the only thing I can say is that I do not find the theme attracting and free traders will surely speak of the blessings of a commerce harassed by protective tariffs.

It is interesting to watch the developments. One thing is certain, Earl Grey will not lightly abandon his idea. He was not unaware of the current of thought prevailing when he began to plan, and he recognized that indifference and perhaps opposition might have to be overcome. The suggestion that the British public subscribe for and present the site to Canada may be the means of bringing the question into the arena of public affairs here and is almost sure to precipitate questions in the House of Commons. Then tariff reformers will be lagged if they do not find the theme attracting and free traders will surely speak of the blessings of a commerce harassed by protective tariffs.
