The grief the bitterness of strife,
The honor without stain. Like Winkelried, he took
Into his manly breast
The sheaf of hostile spears, and broke
A path for the oppressed;

Then from the fatal field

So should the brave depart.

Even as a bridge's arch of stone
Is rounded in the stream.

In concluding the ceremonies the Rabbi said: "Judaism does not insure heavenly blessings only for its followers, but holds the humanitarian doctrine that all men who will lead a life of perfect morality can enter the kingdom of heaven, it matters not to what denomination they may belong."

The reply is that a lawyer needs large perceptive organs, eventuality, comparison and causality. Motive and vital temperament are also required to sustain him in the labors of his profession. It appears that the feelings least needed are agreeableness, imitation, spirituality, acquisitiveness and parental love.
