

now and then, just to back you up.' I don't want you to overdo, of course, but to use common sense, when you come back to the house fatigued take a little stimulant before going to bed, you need it to rest, take it gradually. Your nerves need strengthening, a glass of wine or something else before you go to bed, take it as a tonic. ^{Something to "back you up"} I don't mean to drink at public gatherings, or in high-spirited moments, in those cases just shake them and pass it by, but when you are alone I need a little help to your nerves.

I then spoke of my physical condition, of the pain I had in my wrists at times, and in my knee or I felt it occasionally - Max said it is not necessary, your heart is all right, your lungs are all right, your liver is all right, you are in good condition, it may be something affecting the arteries, I will look you over and will make an examination while you are talking with the others, and will come back and tell you.

I want to tell you that you made a wonderful impression at the meeting. How do you think we are going to win, Max says is looks very hopeful, I think we are going to. I want you to do more of this put out and do a little more 'hollering' our joining were fresh on hollering, father talked loud enough for all the jury to hear and grandfather talked loud enough for all the country to hear, (he laughs heartily at this)

Max then went on to say Mother is so happy, - she has been at Laura's house and came back and says Max now is my dear brave boy she is so happy with you in all your struggles, I said yes but the struggle is always for the things that are higher and best, we need she is helping you in all that relation to our higher life, you are too modest, you stand too close. Keep your horse in reserve, but that is your self a little more than his horse is not a place ^{to stand} always down and hang on be admitted, it is different with a doctor's office or a lawyer's office every rag tag and bobtail has a right to come in, but it is so well they cannot enter a person's home. You have your offices on the Parliament building, even people can see you from different places, your own members and others
