

boring beauty spots is the readily accessible and significantly furnished Tourist headquarters on Granville street. The illustrative cuts used in this publication have been loaned by the Association Executive, and are merely a few of those enriching the pages of its more pretentious booklets.

SOLID PROGRESS

History has furnished other instances of remarkably rapid urban growth—towns that have sprung up, as it were, in the night. But in almost every case, having their origin in the stimulated excitement of a boom, they have lacked the solidity which alone can ensure permanent success. Vancouver has builded well and steadily, so that to-day her outlook is brighter than ever it was in the palmiest years of early hope and expectation. When British Columbia can boast, as it soon must, a population numbered in the millions, the "Terminal City" will indeed become the veritable "Liverpool of the West."

Beyond the
C. P. R.
Depot.