TO A ROBIN IN ALASKA.

O varied thrush! O robin strange! Behold my mute surprise. Thy form and flight I long have known, But not this new disguise.

I do not know thy slaty coat. Nor vest with darker zone. I'm puzzled by thy reclusive ways And song in monotone.

I left thee 'mid my orchard's bloom. When May had crowned the year; Thy nest was on the apple bough, Where rose thy carol clear.

Thou lovest now through fragrant shades, Where hoary spruces grow; Where floor of moss infolds the foot, Like depths of fallen snow.

Loquacious ravens creak and croak. Nor heed me in my quest. The purple grosbeaks perch and sing Upon the cedar's crest.

But thou art doomed to shun the day. A captive of the shade; I only catch thy stealthy flight Athwart the forest glade.

Thy voice is like a hermit's reed. That solitude beguiles; Again 'tis like a silver bell Adrift in forest aisles.

Throw off, throw off this masquerade And don thy ruddy vest. And let the first of old, Beside thy orchard nest.

New B Company Held 800 Boers in Check

At Zand River—Best Description of the Battle Yet Written Home.

We have seen no better account of the part the First Canadian Contingent took in the battle of Zand River during the advance on Pretoria than that written by Sergeant Geo. Shipp, of London. This is the fight in which Corp. Barrall, of the Chatham boys, was wounded.

Thursday, May 10th, I was in one of the warmest places I have struck on this trip. Wednesday evening we arrived three miles from Zand River, camping for the night. The Boers were very heavily entrenched, with an eight-mile frontage. We started out the first thing in the morning for the attack. Our position was on the extreme right of the Boers. Our orders were to advance until we were fired on, then drop and keep them from forcing their way through for the safety of our guns. "B" Company was in front as usual. We got within 1,200 yards when they fired. Our captain, Major Ross, ordered the right flank to advance and get closer, and took us within 500 yards of the river. Then it started in earnest at seven o'clock. The ground we were lying on was sloping towards the river, so they had a perfect view of every man of us. The grass was dried up by the sun, not giving us a bit of cover. The right flank went about 50 yards in advance of our left, but company, so that half of the men could not fire for fear of hitting our fellows in front. Happily I was on the right, where Dr. of us, and got a half company of our men. We started with volleys, and kept the Boer fire down for a couple of hours, when the boys in front ran out of ammunition, and the fellows kept up firing until we got short of ammunition. The Boers took advantage of our silence, and more than poured bullets at us. We kept up for three hours before they were found out. While lying waiting for ammunition McLean in my section got hit in the legs. He arose to take off some equipment and got another shot through the back. He stood it well and asked what was the best thing to do. We called stretcher-bearers, who came very quickly. I will never forget the shower of bullets that came at those fellows. They were directly behind me, about 10 yards, and had to drop. Some would hit the ground all around, the rest went high, and it sounded like a nest of angry hornets. After some time they got McLean away, but not without more trouble, for he got hit on the finger when the stretcher-bearers got him. I heard a most dreadful shriek, and upon looking to my right, I saw Leonard, another man of my section writhing in pain. He got hit in the shoulder, and the bullet passing down through his chest, stopping in his stomach. It came within a quarter of an inch of his heart. It was a case of "shoot or be shot." We were in a tight place, for we could see that in such a fire it would mean three being hit instead of one if they came. You could not ease your position without losing a few extra bullets, and come uncomfortably close. We were at a loss what to do for Leonard, as there was not one but what would risk taking him back, but it was clear to all we would be courting death to attempt it, so I asked him if he had strength to crawl back slowly, which he tried, and succeeded in doing. When next seeing him he was very low. The doctor said he could not recover. We have had no official report of his death yet, and hope he is getting better. Poor Floyd was killed in this fight. He got shot in the shoulder, and suffered terribly, but was put out of pain by another shot in the head. About 2 p.m. we got a splendid crack at the enemy. As they were returning they had to pass up a narrow ridge, which kept them bunched for a while. We did not do anything with them then but kept them in check. At 3 p.m. they had all retired, and we withdrew from a place we will remember for all time to come. We camped on the other side of the river that night, thinking we would have a rest, instead of which our company was sent to help transports across the drift, not seeing bed until 3 a.m. and getting up at 5 a.m., marching 22 miles during the two following days, reaching Kroonstad without opposition. Gen. Hamilton told Col. Eubank that we held 800 Boers from crossing the river who were trying to get at our guns and transports, at that Zand River fight.

WILL MAKE $25000

And Go Round the World in One Year—Greek Globe Trotter

Is Now in Toronto—Has Visited Every Country on the Face of the Earth—An Interesting Personage.

Dr. Peter George Paul Attias, a Greek globe trotter, who is making a tour of the world under a wager that he will accomplish the feat, and make $25,000 within a year, is at present in Toronto, where he is an object of great interest.

Dr. Attias is described in his passports as of medium height and fair complexion, grey eyes, high forehead, and regular features, but these particulars give no hint of the extraordinary intellectual and physical powers contained within. His muscles are like bars of steel, and his mental activity is almost bewildering to minds accustomed to proceed at an ordinary pace.

Although the English is, he says, the least familiar to him of the twelve languages which he speaks, he pours forth in it a perfect torrent of ideas, speaking much more rapidly than the majority of English people.

In an account of his career, Dr. Attias said he was born at Alexandria, Egypt, of Greek parents, on May 29, 1872. From his early youth he determined to be an explorer, and his father, a wealthy Greek merchant and broker, did not discourage the inclination. He was educated in Paris and took the B. A. degree by special license, when a mere boy. Subsequently, at the University of Geneva, he took his doctor's degree in geographical science. At the age of 21 the sudden death of his father threw young Attias entirely upon his own resources.

In spite of the solicitations of his relatives, he persisted in his determination to lead a life of adventure, and began in Syria the long journey on foot which has since formed so remarkable a feature of his career. In 1892, on the recommendation of the Geneva University, he was appointed chief of staff to the wealthy Russian exile Prince Zamourin, by whose direction he undertook a series of explorations in Central Africa during the years 1892-1895. Prince Zamourin's death cut off this enterprise in 1897.

Dr. Attias then undertook a walking tour of the world on a wager with the London Sporting Club. The stakes were $25,000, and the journey was to cover 40,000 miles by land and 28,000 by sea, to be accomplished in three years. Dr. Attias performed the task in a month less than the stipulated time and won the $25,000, besides $15,000 on the percentage of his backers' winnings and the payment of all his expenses.

Now, with his newly-married wife, Attias is making a tour of the world in any way he pleases, starting with money, and undertaking by means of lectures and a publications exhibited of his travels to make a fortune. To clear $25,000 during the journey. The trip is to be completed within a year, and Montreal was the starting place. If he succeeds, Dr. Attias expects to win $100,000 in stakes and percentages. Dr. Attias, who has with him a private secretary, named Joseph Grandin, and three servants, is staying at the Queen's, where he will be for a few days. The party will visit during their journey, Australia, Japan, India, the Suez Canal, Egypt, and finally Russia. Dr. Attias is acting during the journey as correspondent for eleven European and American newspapers.

FALL OF A GOOD MAN.

Passed as a Moral Disinfectant, but Expected.

"What's become of Primble? Why didn't you hear about it? Well, well! It was odd enough, to be sure, and quite a tragedy in a limited way. Poor Primble! You remember how circumpect he was in his conduct, and how thoroughly he looked it? Well, when Filkins got into the paper as the man who was seen in Newark two days before the sale of the bottle-holder that figured in the poisoning case, Filkins began to get rattled about it, and to think he needed moral support, and he finally went to Primble and offered him two dollars and a half to walk up town with him afterwards. Primble saw no harm in taking him up, and was seen with him almost daily for a month.

"So when Jeroloman's wife disappeared, leaving a note saying to drag the Baer river, it put Jeroloman under a cloud for awhile, during which time he bargained with Primble to walk with him on Fifth avenue three times a week, from 4 to 6, at $3 for each appearance. Primble was building up quite a business as a moral disinfectant, when suddenly his engagement to Miss Strait was broken, on the ground that he kept bad company, and immediately afterward he lost his job in Stringham's bank for the same reason. "After that he had no reputation that it would have paid any one to hire, and I don't know where he went—to the Klondyke, or Cuba, or some place. It was two days for I think the whole thing began in good nature, and, barring his greed, which was really due to his haste to be married, he hadn't a vice in the world.

"Will he ever come back? Oh, I dare say. All he needs is to grow wicked enough to learn the need of showing a proper regard for appearances. He'll be forgotten in three months, and if he has a good summer in the Klondyke (if that's where he is), very likely Miss Strait will take him on again. A New York man ought not to be permanently affected by a little business reverse of that sort."

Grandpa

Everybody's proud of this sort of Grandpa, and he's proud of himself; proud of his clear brain and active body. There are other kinds of grandpas that we can't be proud of. Weak of body and feeble of mind, we can only pity them. They no more live; they only exist. What makes the difference between these two classes of old men? A sound stomach and a plentiful supply of pure, rich blood. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery strengthens the stomach, purifies the blood, and increases the activity of the blood-making glands. It won't make old men young, but it will enable old men to assimilate the food they eat, and so strengthen them for a life of reasonable exertion.

"I suffered for six years with constipation and indigestion, during which time I employed several physicians, but they could not reach my case," writes Mr. G. Popplewell, of Bureka Springs, Carroll Co., Ark. "I felt that there was no help for me; could not retain food on my stomach; had vertigo and would fall helpless to the floor. Two years ago I commenced taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and in three weeks I was improved from the start. After taking twelve bottles of the 'Discovery' I was able to do light work, and have been improving ever since. I am now in good health for one of my age—60 years. I owe it all to Dr. Pierce's medicine."

Old people often need a laxative medicine. The best for them is Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets.

MR. BURENS OF AMERICA

Was the Author and Tam o' Shan-taire Was the Name of One of the Poems.

"This incident happened to me in the capital of the Grand Duchy of Luxembourg," says Sutherland Edwards in his "Personal Recollections." "I had just entered a hotel, when the proprietor came up to me and said: 'From the cut of your shirt collar and the tie of your cravat, I imagine you, sir, to be an Englishman.' 'You are right,' I replied.

"I have a daughter. She is intelligent, docile, and has been educated at one of our best convents. 'Is she rich and beautiful?' I felt inclined to ask, for the tone adopted by the father seemed to be that of light comedy. I contented myself, however, with saying, 'Your story interests me.'"

"An unprincipled professor," continued the father, 'taking advantage of my child's innocence.' 'Oh, heavens!' I exclaimed. 'Has, under pretense of instructing her in English, taught her what I believe to be Irish.' 'You frighten me.' 'And now, said the afflicted parent, 'you will perhaps allow me to introduce her to you, and you will kindly tell me, I hope, what strange tongue she has acquired.' 'Permission accordingly was given, and I was introduced to my host's pretty and interesting daughter, who, in reply to my question, told me that the book was by 'a Mr. Burens,' and was in verse.

"The daughter of some new American humorist," I said to myself. 'What a pity to give it to such a girl!'

"What are the poems about? Can you tell me the name of any one of them?" I asked. 'Tam o' Shan-taire,' she replied."

Bargain Counter Voting. The woman candidate faced the mean man who wished to sell his vote. "No, sir!" she said, "I will not give you $1 for your vote. It is not worth it."

"Take it for 90 cents, lady," said the mean man. "Why didn't you say that before? And can you vote twice for $1.50?"

It was endless to dispute upon everything that is disputable.

Age is not all decay; it is the ripening, the swelling of the flesh life within, in that withers and bursts the husk.
