A Well Appointed Coach on his. He remained about Mr. Righe's place until about one o'clock on Sunday morning, sometimes besting and chasing the cettle, and once he came in and went are und the house, hammering it with a stict, and cutting up all kinds of capers, and overy new and then, indulging in a few unearthly yells. Mr. Tighe said he would know Jesse Wild if he saw him in daylight, buttas it was dark he cannot say whether this person was him or not. He thinks the man he saw was about the same sine as Jesse Wild, Mr. Tighe says he is willing to state the about facts on eath before a magistrate at any time when called upon. Mr. Tighe's place is about four miles from Kinburn, and at the extreme west end of the aramp. Now, Mr. Edifor, I hope that whose cuty it is to look into this strange affair may, no longew delay, as I think it a most shooking thing to have any human being living in such a state, for, whoever he is, he is evidently crasy in the full sense of the word.
