There is no crime so great as one perpetrated against the freedom of peoples. A man's purposes, not what he has accomplished, are the true standard of his ding. character.

Some people live without purpose, and they pass through the world like straws on a river-mere puppets in the tide. It is needful that a man be true; not that he live. Are men dogs, that they must be happy? Luther dared to be un-Do right and fear no one; thou mayst be sure that, with all they consideration for the world, thou wilt in ver satisfy the
