

own opinion is that he was alone, although there may have been a dozen there. Had there been more than one he would have saved some of them, and while one held up the driver the other would have robbed the coach. The second in the train was I understand, a gold bar of $2,100, another of $600 and the balance in gold dust, amounting in all to something over $4,100. Several parties were organized and had started in pursuit. Two men who camped at Camlin's lake and who stole a canoe and a heavy coat of the highwayman or men had been seen since. Several parties were organized and had started in pursuit. They could get from Mahood lake to Clearwater and thence down the North Thompson. Two men who, on the 23rd of June, left Ashcroft on foot for Clearwater, are also suspected. One of them was a large, powerful man and apparently a pretty heavy thief. On Wednesday Constable E. F. W. Pease organized a party, and that evening started on the N. Thompson trail to the highwayman camp. They were successful in their attempts to trap the highwayman. Besides the considerable amount of money, they found a large quantity of goods, including clothing, a watch, and a pocket watch. They also found a letter from the highwayman to a man in Victoria, in which he promised to pay the man $500. The highwayman was seen by the constable on the 23rd of July. He was a large, powerful man, and was seen near the highwayman's camp. He was seen with a woman, and they were seen to be talking to each other.
