The Recent Death of the Queen-Dow ager Compels the Natives to Wear Sackcloth for a Period of Three Years.

A whole nation in mourning! Twelve. millions of men, women and children wearing sackcloth! All business suspended, all festivities stopped, conversation itself at a standstill!

of Korea to-day, says Once a Week, and it is a question as to whether this will not continue to be its condition for the

Korea is in mourning for the queendowager. There is no land in the world where filial piety prevails to so large an extent, and there is no country where mourning is so terrible as here The law requires that every man shall put on mourning for three years when his father dics, and the law prescribes the character of the clothes which shall be worn. The mourning garb is a gown of straw-colored sackcloth, bound around the waist with a great straw rope. The mourner must wear a hat as big around as a parasol, and he must hold a screen up before his face, so that no one may look upon his sorrowful countenance. White is the mourning color of Korea, and this gown of unbleached cotton is supposed to be white The screen is of the same material, and if he smokes his pipe must be wrapped with white. The mourner must wear this costume for three years, and during that time he can engage in no work or pleasure. When a king or queen dies the whole nation is expected to go into mourning-at least this has been the custom of the past, and it is said that once Korca had three different kings who died within a period of ten years, thus keeping the whole nation inactive and in mourning during that time. This custom of mourning thus be comes a very serious national issue, and if it is not changed Korea can never take her place as one of the smart, ac tive and progressive business people of the east. No business will stand being neglected for three years at a time, and it is due to this custom that the hermit kingdom is as poor to-day as it is. It is a serious thing as respects the other re-lations of life outside that of business. A lover may be about to marry his sweetheart, and his father dies during the pendency of the engagement. The wedding day must then be put off for at least three years, and if at the end of this time the young man's mother dies, he has to wait another three years before he can get married. During my stay in Korea a year or two ago I was shown a man whom death kept out of his matrimonial rights for a period of twelve years. At about the time that was set for his wedding day his father died, and at the end of the three years mourning his mother died, thus compel-ling him to wait three years more. This time death left his family and went into that of his betrothed, and two deaths more kept him out of his bride another six years.

The mourning hat of Korea completely hides the head of the mourner. It is not etiquette to peep under it nor to speak to the man who wears it. It is, in fact, the most perfect disguise that a man can have in Korea, for the officers will not arrest a mourner, and some years ago the French missionaries traveled all over the country in this disguise; and though the police were after them, they for a long time escaped detection. Many of the mourners carry a long staff in connection with the hat and they bind their fans and ornament everything connected with their dress with white. They get their mourning customs from China, but they carry them to much greater extremes than do the Chinese of to-day. The Chinese have mourning costumes but these do not extend to the hat. The white thread into their cues, and wear even white shoes. They pretend to mourn for a parent for at least three years, but this period is cut down to twenty-seven months. For thirty days after the death of a near relative they are not expected to shave their heads or change their clothes, and there is a penalty for the non-observation of mournng. When Li Hung Chang's mother died a year or so ago, he asked to be al-lowed to resign from his office of viceroy of China, and go into mourning for her for three years. He was too valuable a man, however, for the emperor to lose, and he was told that his period of mourning must be restricted to three months.

The Chinese have rules of mourning for the nation in case of the death of an
