

ON THE IRISH QUESTION

More plain talking from Prof. Goldwin Smith.

Parson's Policy Declared to be that of a British Politician.

The announcement that Mr. Gladstone had proposed to capitulate to Parnell, to give Ireland a separate parliament, and to turn it out by the help of the Parnellite vote, appears to have been premature.

No wonder that the Tories who had just been rebuffed by Mr. Gladstone on their intricate proposal with the Parnellites, should have denounced his proposal as profligate. There are symptoms, nevertheless, which indicate that some scheme of the kind is in course of preparation.

Mr. Herbert Gladstone, an Irishman, has proposed a scheme which has resulted in his father's political alliance with the Parnellites.

It is not surprising that the Parnellites should have been so ready to accept of a scheme of the kind, which would have placed a separate parliament and justice in the hands of the Parnellites.

The Parnellites are not only ready to accept of a scheme of the kind, but they are also ready to accept of a scheme of the kind, which would have placed a separate parliament and justice in the hands of the Parnellites.

The Parnellites are not only ready to accept of a scheme of the kind, but they are also ready to accept of a scheme of the kind, which would have placed a separate parliament and justice in the hands of the Parnellites.
