In his speech at the opening of Parliament at Sydney, N. S. W., the Governor, referring to colonial federation, said there was very likelihood that the cordial discussion now being carried on would lead to a patriotic agreement between the colonies on this question.

In reply to the Governor's speech at the opening of the New South Wales Parliament, both houses adopted a resolution expressing the desire that the present discussion of the subject of federation by the colonies would lead to the creation of a federal Australia on the basis of mutual good will and enduring friendship.

No foreign government has yet recognized the Provisional Government of Brazil, and the Brazilian Ministry await the decision of the Assembly before claiming recognition. The French officials in Brazil have been instructed to maintain the good relations formerly held with the Imperial Government. All the foreign consuls in Brazil are receiving similar orders.

A man supposed to be "Jack the Ripper" was seen upon five hundred women in the poorer quarters of Madrid Thursday while he was in custody of officers who were removing him from the gaol to the court room, where he was to be arraigned on a charge of having recently committed a murder in circumstances resembling those of the Whitechapel murders in London. He was severely beaten.

The day after Dom Pedro sailed from Rio de Janeiro the provisional government of Brazil telegraphed to the Brazilian minister at Lisbon, directing him, upon the Emperor's arrival, to tender him a general reception. The Brazilian colony at Lisbon regarded this action as dictated by a delicate consideration on the part of the provisional government toward Dom Pedro. Several of the Brazilian ministers at European courts are going to Lisbon to take part in the reception of the dethroned Emperor.

In an interview, Mr. David, M.P.P., explained his reasons for asking Mr. Mercer to relieve him of the responsibility of the supervision of the evening schools. He states that the task involved more work and more time than he could afford to give, and now that the schools are a fait accompli he believed it best to leave the enterprise in the hands of a competent contractor, aided by the director, Mr. T. Temple.

All the schools formally began instruction last evening.

Mr. J. J. Lanning, of the Grand Trunk railway, one of the most popular officers connected with that corporation, to whose courtesy so many people stand indebted, left yesterday for Kentucky for the benefit of his health. "Joe," as he is familiarly termed, has been suffering from chest trouble for some time past, and rest in the pine districts of the south has been recommended him as the surest and speediest way of bringing about a perfect cure. He will take a rest of a month or two at Haywick, Marion county, Kentucky.

The following were seriously injured: Mrs. Minnie Gross, aged 85; Hattie Gross, aged two and a half years; Joseph Binner, aged 40; John E. Clauson, a journeyman baker, aged 32.

Mrs. Minnie Gross died this afternoon, the fact of her being in a delicate condition hastening her death. Owing to the fact that she was lying in the kitchen when the fire broke out, she was unable to escape, and was found in the ruins. Another family, consisting of a man named Binner and his wife and six children, occupied the rear portion of the house. Mrs. Binner and two of the children were suffocated. Mrs. Gross was so badly burned that she died soon after escaping from the building.

A TERRIBLE HOLOCAUST.

THE LAST MAN TO LEAVE.

The last man to leave the building was O. Alfred Williams, managing editor, and although himself badly burned, he gave the following statement of how those reported dead, having been an eye witness of the deaths of all but one: Miles and Millman, with a number of printers, started down the fire escape. A blast of hot smoke and flame struck Millman as he started and he lost his hold, and in falling knocked Miles off, both falling from the seventh floor to the ground, and at the sixth floor, knocking Pickett and Prof. Olsen, who had reached the fire escape from that floor. The four men, in falling, struck against the lowest platform and bounded away from the building, and were dead when they struck the ground. When Williams started down the fire was burning his hair and he narrowly escaped the fate of the others ahead, the smoke being overpowering.

DIED TRYING TO ESCAPE.

The printers on the ladder escaped with slight burns. Igoe and Jenkins sought to escape by the wire, but had been weakened by the smoke so that both soon fell off, Jenkins being dead when picked up, and Igoe, who jumped from the window ledge for the extension ladder, but slipped and fell to the street. A net had been spread to catch him, but he was too heavy and struck the ground and, seriously injured, died soon after. Pickett, Igoe, Miles and McCutcheon were married and Jenkins was to be married in a short time. Millman lost his wife, a couple of weeks ago and had just resumed work. Jones, of the Globe, who came here from Philadelphia a year ago, and who was reported to be in the building, is safe.

A DRAVE ELEVATOR MAN.

The elevator made three trips after the fire broke out. He says he saw a man come out from an office and try to escape, but before he could reach him a sheet of flame struck the man and at the same time he pulled a revolver and shot himself. Chief Stevens, of the fire department, lays the blame for the great loss of life to the lack of fire escapes and says the department did what it could to save lives. The total loss is placed at $300,000. The insurance foots up $150,000. The elevator man, who made brave attempts to bring down the occupants of the upper floor when the shaft was on fire, thinks there were still seven people on the eighth floor when escape was cut off, and that they must have perished. He took a couple of women up a few minutes before the fire and says they did not come down again. He did not know them, but says they wanted to see the city editor of the Pioneer Press.

SAW A PLAY WHILE THEIR HUSBANDS DIED. While Messrs. Igoe and Miles were attending to their duties, their wives, who are great friends, were attending the theatre together, intending, as they had often done, to go to the office and return home with Mr. Miles. When they came out of the theatre the office was on fire and their husbands had perished a few steps away from them. They spent the day together to-day mourning the fate of their husbands. Mr. Igoe has four children and Mrs. Miles two infant children.

Who the two suicides were is unknown. It is now almost positively known there are no more printers in the sun, everyone's card being accounted for. There is a possibility that some printers come to town last night, and went to work without turling in their cards, but this is doubted. Several employees of the Swedish paper, which was published on the eighth floor, were in the habit of sleeping in the building and nothing has been heard of them. Also some law students slept in offices in the building and some of them may be lost.

SOME OF THE INJURED.

As far as learned, the injured are: William Lown, printer, burned on hands and face; E. C. Andrews, printer, burned on hands and face; George Worden, printer, burned hands and face; F. Gerber, a deaf printer, hurt about the head by falling.

CHARLES A. WILLIAMS, managing editor of Triune, badly burned about the head and face; W. H. WILLIAMS, foreman of the composing rooms, badly burned on the face; S. H. JONES, Pioneer Press reporter, hands and face slightly burned; FRANK HOVY, printer, burned about the neck.

HOW TELEGRAPHIC IGOE STUCK TO HIS POST. NEW YORK, December 1.—When Igoe gave warning of a fire on the Associated press wire, he said, "There's a fire on the third floor of this Triune building and I'm on the seventh floor." After a moment's pause he said to the New York operator "Go ahead, Chandler," and New York began sending again and after a brief pause yielded to Cleveland, to whom Igoe sent the following:—

CLEVELAND, O.—Captain Joseph Moffat, a well-known lake man, was killed to-day by falling into the hole of his vessel.

Just there Igoe "broke." "Boys," he yelled on the wire and there was another brief pause and all the men on the circuit were listening with interest for they had noted in the transmission by Igoe of the word "boys" a tremendous movement, just as a layman could detect a tremor in a human voice.

"Boys, I've got to stand you off. I'm the only one left on this floor. Everybody is gone and I can't stay any longer." The work went on again and no one of Igoe's colleagues thought seriously of his good-bye until their cablebulletin of loss of life, and among them one stating the probability that poor Igoe had stayed too long. The last 200 words he remained to take cost him his life.

CYNTHIA-POLYNESIAN.

The Judge's Decision in the Collision Case. After a lengthy review of the evidence in the Cynthia-Polynesian case, Hon. Geo. Irvine, Q.C., judge of the Vice-Admiralty court, said:—I take it to be clearly proved that, assuming that both ships are properly navigated, there is no difficulty or danger in meeting at this place at full speed and there was no suggestion of danger up to the time that the Polynesian starboarded, at the same moment that the Cynthia ported, which unexpected movement rendered a collision inevitable, and although looking at the matter with the knowledge of the circumstances which we now possess it may be said, as the assessor suggests, that if the Cynthia had ported or the Polynesian had starboarded, the fatal mistake which she committed, there was no reason to suppose that such a mistake would be made and no obligation on the part of the Cynthia to provide against it. At the moment the Polynesian starboarded the collision became inevitable and both vessels stopped and reversed immediately. I may mention with reference to a remark made by the Nautilus assessor as to the obligation of the Polynesian to direct her course to port in consequence of the signals given, that this obligation was completed when she had proceeded towards the north and then starboarded and that she was quite at liberty to take any course which the persons in charge of her thought it best to do, and her pilot was of the same opinion, as he says he had not before reaching the red buoy decided on which side he should pass the other vessel, moreover when he starboarded for the second time he thought it necessary to signal. The last point which I have to consider is the question as to the Cynthia being a crossing ship. I have already decided that the ships were on an on and on and were prevented by the rule applicable to such cases, but as this point has been so often alluded to in the course of the trial, it is necessary to advert to it once more. I am of opinion that at the moment when the Polynesian passed the red buoy the vessels were in or nearly in what is shown on the chart as the ordinary course of vessel, and were both on the north side of the centre of the channel. The Polynesian was probably (making allowance for inaccuracy in the estimate of distances) some 100 feet south of the line marked as the usual course of vessels. Now, let any person interested in this case examine the chart and place the Polynesian at the red buoy and about three hundred (300) feet below the line marking the usual course of vessels, which the evidence shows was about their relative positions at this time, and it will be seen that both vessels were entering a curve in the channel, which necessarily caused the Cynthia to show her starboard bow to the Polynesian, and that as they approached they would become end on. It must be remembered there is a distinct curve in the channel at this place caused by the point known as Longue Pointe. The pilot of the Polynesian says it is much more correct to say "on a narrow point" than shown on the plan. But, in any case, she should have known and understood this, and not have imagined that because the other vessel was following this course she was to sail across the river. Moreover, if the Cynthia was a crossing ship, having the other vessel on her starboard bow, it was her duty to keep out of the way and the duty of the Polynesian to keep her course, which she did not do.

On the whole, I am of opinion that the pilot of the Polynesian is alone to blame for the accident, and I adjudge accordingly.

DRAMATIC DRIFT.

Fanny Davenport has her theatrical library insured for $10,000.

It is rumored that Lillian Russell will be at the head of her own comic opera company next season.

Madame Albani sailed from Liverpool on November 21st, for a fourth, visit to Canada and the United States.

Harriett Ford, an American girl, has made a success at the Globe Theatre, in London, in a comic opera called "A Promise."

Next season Roland Reed will be seen in a new comedy by George Jessop and William Gill, entitled "American Assurance."

Frederick Ward is making extensive preparations for a magnificent cheap opera revival in New York next season, and has already engaged a number of well known actors and actresses to support him.

Robert Mantell is the happy possessor of half a dozen gold and silver medals won by him when a member of the Ulster Athletic Club, of Belfast, Ireland. He is very fond of athletics, and devotes much of his spare time to fencing and clubbing.

Since it has been decided that Mr. Edward Lloyd, the great tenor, will come to America for the spring festivals, Mr. L. M. Ruben, his American agent, is being with offers from musical societies throughout the country. He will receive $2,000 ($10,000) for the opera in Chicago, Boston and Cincinnati.

"THE BRIGANDS" AND "NANON." Next week the Carleton Opera Company will produce at the Academy of Music in this city the two great New York successes, "The Brigands" and "Nanon." It is said that Mr. Carleton's company this season is the best he ever had. In Miss Lane and Alice Carle Mr. Carleton has two of the best comic opera singers, as they unite beauty with excellent voices, and are superb actresses. Mr. J. K. Murray is an excellent baritone, Mr. Chas. Gielgowl a very funny comedian, and there are many other competent artists who support Mr. W. T. Carleton, the popular baritone, who assumes the part of the Brigand Chief in "The Brigands." The entire company is said to be a revelation of vocal ability in light opera. The chorus work has been brought to absolute perfection, and as there is a great deal in it in "The Brigands" and "Nanon," the success of the opera will be greatly helped. The company brings beautiful costumes and entirely new scenery with them.

MR. MARTIN'S LATEST.

He Wants to Unite Manitoba and the Territories to Secure More Political Power.

WINNIPEG, November 28.—Attorney-General Martin has a new scheme. He is evolving the idea of inviting representative men of the Northwest territories to a conference with the leaders of this province, with a view of ascertaining what could be done towards establishing a union between Manitoba and the Territories. There is not sufficient population in either he says, to make a good province, but united the two would make a magnificent province. Such union would give the Territories responsible government, and with all the public lands under their control the great western province would wield the power and influence that properly belongs to it. What the feeble protests of either Manitoba or the Northwest could not secure, a united country could obtain without fear or refusal. Mr. Martin says he did not think that under existing political circumstances in the west any such move as he proposed would be accepted.

St. John would not think of allowing it, but according to Mr. Martin the present state of affairs in the east could not continue long. There would soon be a big smash-up, and then was the time for the great west to step forward to assert itself. Such a union would result in untold benefit to the whole country. In any event he would like to see the people interested called together in order to discuss the question and ascertain what the true sentiment is. He firmly believed that if opinion were tested it would be found to be overwhelmingly in favor of the proposal. He would do what he could to promote the matter and to bring about a conference.

A Bishop's Novel Proposal.

TORONTO, November 28.—The last day of the Anglican Jubilee closed to-night with an eloquent sermon in St. James Cathedral by Bishop Sullivan of Algoma. During the day a conference was held in St. James school house, at which papers on the history of the various dioceses were read and discussed and thereon. Dr. J. George Hodgins read in the morning a history of the Toronto diocese from its foundation by Bishop Strachan to the present. During the afternoon Bishop Baldwin started an interesting discussion on the causes of the lack of numerical strength in the church, in beginning which he urged that the parochial system be dropped and that a kind of relation be introduced in the stationing of clergy.

Dr. Langtry, Bishop Sullivan and others supported the proposals of the bishop. During one of the discussions of the day, Bishop Lewis, of Ontario, announced that he would try to change the See house of his diocese from Kingston to Ottawa.
