International Association for Exchange of Students for Technical Experience

Program details

The International Association for Exchange of Students for Technical Experience (IAESTE) is an international exchange program providing on-the-job training experience for students in their own field of study. It includes 47 member countries on all five continents.

The association was founded in 1948 in Europe. Since then, more than 212 000 students have participated in exchanges. Canada joined in 1953. IAESTE is an independent non-governmental enterprise, with consultative relationships to UNESCO, the UN Economic and Social Council, the UN Industrial Development Organization, the International Labour Organization and other bodies.

A registration fee is charged to each student wishing to participate. A portion is refunded in the event that no suitable matching job is found.
