

Clergymen where they are absolutely needed. You will this evening hear from His Lordship one chief object of his late journey to England; and that the demands of India and the Cape, and the new Diocese of British Columbia, were such that all those whose hearts turned to the Missionary work of the Church, were drawn to the scenes of direct conflict with heathenism, and to the newer Colonies. Still, some Students for the Institution accompanied the Bishop on his return, and we may also congratulate His Lordship, and indeed ourselves, both for his and our own sake, that he was accompanied by the friend whose services were formerly so valuable in this neighbourhood, and who, we have reason to know, has rendered much important assistance both to the Bishop and the Church of Newfoundland during his absence.

But we must feel that to ourselves we must look, and that we must in faith and love to God, offer not only our money, but ourselves and our sons for the service of Almighty God and of His Church. Few offer themselves for the work of the priesthood; and we should indeed do well to pray to God that He would raise up amongst us true Ministers to labour for the salvation of men's immortal souls, and to bring home to all the saving knowledge of the Gospel of Christ.
