The Healthy Baby

Since civilization began, the gradual awakening of the various senses and the progressive development of the common acts and functions of life have been the same, generation after generation, your baby is very much like every other baby so that a standard has been devised whereby we can judge whether a baby comes up to the standard of the normal baby or not.

Baby doesn't notice much of anything the first three months of his life. Loud noises disturb him, so we know that he hears. His eyes will follow a moving object, so he has some sight. Soon he discovers his hands, and begins to play with them.

At three or four months he smiles and holds his head up. At six months he sits up with a pillow at his back and recognizes members of the family. He holds things in his hand and puts them in his mouth. And now, too, the first tooth appears. At eight or nine months he sits upon the floor alone and possibly learns to creep.

The age of walking is variable. The baby will walk when his bones and muscles are strong enough; and although he should not be coaxed, he should not be hampered by heavy, tight diapers.

Up to this time there is not much danger of urging him too fast. Do not let him perform tricks for every caller. Do not let him stand on his toes with or hold in their arms. Do not take him to parties or to see people; and keep him from playing with other children. At a year, he begins to talk a little. He gradually learns a few names, and puts two or three words together. At two years can express his thoughts readily should need. Children who talk much, while some children who are inarticulate, are not to be discouraged. Adonids are frequent cause of delayed talking, and least be considered if a child should attempt to talk at two and one-half years.

Leaping, stuttering and defective speech of any sort should be nipped in the bud. The mother should be busy in training the child to breathe properly and use correct sounds.

St. Lawrence Bridge May Be Swept Away

LEWIS, April 3.—Owing to the abnormal rise of the Chaudiere River, caused by sudden thaws and heavy rains, great damage to the bridge, and others the splendid bridge, completed in 1906, a short distance south of the new Quebec bridge across the St. Lawrence River and which leads to the city, is in danger of being swept away. Such is the danger that the contractors M. P. and J. T. Davis, who are working at it since January last, have been seriously undermined by the pushing waters, and owing to the open weather they continued their work up to a day or two ago, when they were forced to stop owing to the sudden rise of water, which is not expected to recede until late in May.

Mrs. Pankhurst Is Given Sentence of Three Years

Jury's Strong Recommendation to Mercy Had Little Apparent Effect on Judge Lush, Who Said Severe Sentence Was Necessary—Suffragettes Cry "Shame" and March Out Singing—Mrs. Pankhurst Prepared to Be Martyr.

LONDON, April 3.—(Can. Press.)—Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, the leader of the militant suffragettes, was today found guilty and sentenced to three years' penal servitude at the Old Bailey sessions on the charge of "shame" from the militant suffragettes, who crowded the court.

The trial had lasted two days and when the judge, Sir Charles Monague Lush, pronounced sentence his speech was received with loud cries of "shame" from the militant suffragettes, who crowded the court.

The jury added a strong recommendation for mercy, and when the judge pronounced sentence the women rose in angry protest.

Sang in Defiance. As Mrs. Pankhurst stood in the prisoners' enclosure, her sympathizers cheered wildly and then filed out of court singing "March On, March On" to the tune of the "Marseillaise."

The only interesting development in the evidence today was the revelations made by the police who had fruitlessly tried to take Miss Forbes Robertson's finger print in order to ascertain her real identity. She was imprisoned under the name of Margaret James and sentenced to six months in jail on Feb. 5, on a charge of wrecking a number of windows.

Denied Malice. Mrs. Pankhurst, who acted as her own counsel, said she did not wish to testify or to call any witnesses. She spoke for 50 minutes, at times wandering so far from the matter before the court that the judge severely censured her.

She denied any malicious intention. Neither she nor the other militant suffragettes were wicked or malicious. She complained that women were not tried by their peers, and that these trials were an admission of what women were suffering in order to obtain their rights. Personally, she had had to surrender a large part of her income in order to be free to participate in the suffrage movement.

Assaults Man-Made Laws. Speaking with much feeling, Mrs. Pankhurst severely criticized the man-made laws, and said that the divorce law alone was sufficient to justify a revolution by the women.

In impassioned tones she declared that whatever might be her sentence she would not submit. From the very moment when she left the court she would refuse to eat and would start a "hunger strike." She would, she said, come out of prison dead or alive at the earliest possible moment.

Justice Lush, in summing up, told the jury that Mrs. Pankhurst's speeches were an admission that she had intended to the perpetration of illegal acts.

Will Refuse Food. Mrs. Pankhurst almost broke down when the jury pronounced its verdict. Learning of the terms of the prisoners' enclosure and addressing the judge before he passed sentence, she said:

"If it is impossible to find a different verdict, I want to say to you and to the jury that it is your duty as private citizens to do what you can to put an end to this state of affairs."

She then repeated her determination to end her sentence as soon as possible, saying: "I do not want to commit suicide. Life is very dear to all of us. I want to see the women of this country enfranchised."

"I will keep it up as long as I have an ounce of strength left in me."

Offence Was Deliberate. "I deliberately broke the law, not hysterically and not emotionally, but for a set and serious purpose, because I honestly believe it is the only way."

"This movement will go on whether I live or die. These women will go on until women have obtained the common rights of citizenship, as they shall have over the civilized world before the movement is over."

Justice Lush said: "I must pass a severe sentence on you. If you would only realize the wrong you are doing and use influence in the right direction I should be the first to use my best endeavors to secure a mitigation of your sentence. I cannot and I will not regard your crime as trivial. It is a most serious one."

GREETINGS TO CHURCHILL. PLYMOUTH, Eng., April 3.—Militant suffragettes made active preparations this morning to welcome Winston Churchill, first lord of the admiralty, who later arrived here on board the admiralty yacht.

The women painted their greetings in big letters on Smeaton Lighthouse and other points of vantage on The Hoe, facing the sea. One of them ran to Winston Spencer Churchill. No security until you give women the vote, no matter how big the navy."

Another said: "To save the state from shipwreck give women the vote."

CITY WILL WAIT TILL NEXT YEAR

To Obtain Legislation For Extending Civic Car Lines.

LOCAL IMPROVEMENT Will Wake Up in the Matter of Collecting City Taxes.

There being no time to bring before this session of the legislature the proposed plan to extend the civic car lines on the local improvement plan, the transportation committee has decided to lay the matter over until next year.

The committee has submitted to the corporation counsel a proposition to have all the street car lines done by local improvement plan, and a reported to the board of control is expected today.

Ald. Wanless is now preparing a plan for reorganizing the system of city markets.

It is now acknowledged by the city council that the policy of collection of taxes for the past four or five years has been lax and that there has been a steady drift towards most unbusinesslike methods in having the rolls returned.

The recent action of the council in ordering the return of rolls within a reasonable time, is to be supplemented, if possible, by Controller Foster, who will move in the board of control that a system of "follow-up" be inaugurated.

His proposition will be that blank slips for monthly reports be furnished each collector, and that these monthly reports be sent to the board of control. By this plan each collector will be made to show each month the progress he is making in getting in the money, and if his results are not satisfactory, he will have to give place to a collector who will show satisfactory results.

EFFICIENT HOUSEKEEPING BY HENRIETTA D. GRAUEL DOMESTIC SCIENCE LECTURER

MACARONI

ONCE upon a time, a chef, wishing to please his royal master, made a new dish. It was highly approved by the king, who asked its cost. The sum mentioned seemed high to him, and he said, "Buoni, macaroni—good, but very dear."

It has since become very dear, in another sense, to the Italians, for it is to them what the potato is to the Irish and the rice to the orientals.

It is recommended for all that stands for good living and economy. Thru the government report we are told that it will truly bring down the cost of food when combined with other material.

Break the macaroni into inch lengths and stew ten minutes in briskly boiling water, well salted. Drain the macaroni and add to it half as much cooked chopped chicken, beef, or best of all, boiled ham, as you have macaroni. If convenient add two beaten eggs to give richness to the dish. Season with pepper and a little more salt. Pour over the mixture enough hot stock or boiling water to almost cover. Put in a hot oven twenty minutes.

If you have some ham fat and cold beef, chop the two together for this recipe—it makes a good combination.

Some women have a little knowledge of the imported food as the cook who sent her first order of it back to the grocer because, "All them little stims was empty." To them let me say that the directions given above for boiling the pasta must be followed exactly. That is, the macaroni must be thrown into water that is really boiling, not merely hot; otherwise you will have a paste, not a food.

The imported macaroni is made from a hard wheat that is rich in gluten and strong in flavor. This wheat is grown in Russia especially for such use.

Somewhat Italian laborers called attention to this fact a few days ago by striking in the middle of an important piece of road work. Their contractor had furnished them macaroni, but they were unable to accomplish their heavy work upon it, as it was American manufacture. When the Italian article was given the work was cheerfully resumed.

Macaroni al Napolitano is made with chicken broth in place of beef stock and tomatoes are added.

Macaroni Milanais is macaroni with shredded sweet peppers and tomatoes.

The pleasant thing about this accommodating cereal food is that it may be the base or foundation of many excellent dishes; again, it plays Hobson's choice and furnishes a main dish without any additions but that of seasonings.

The next time you need a starch vegetable to balance a meal too rich or too greasy try macaroni and you will be as pleased as the you had made a new friend.
