

WASHINGTON LUMBER EXPORTS.

THE state of Washington lumbermen have been finding good markets for their timber in China, Japan, Sandwich Islands, Australia and South Africa. Last year the foreign shipments from Puget Sound aggregated over 80,000,000 feet. One mill on the sound cut 86,000,000 feet last year, and one mill at Tacoma can cut 175,000 feet a day of ten hours, or about 45,000,000 feet a year. The Washington lumbermen are anxious for the completion of the Nicaragua Canal, because that will give them water transportation to the Atlantic seaboard and to Europe for their long fir timber. The supply of this fir timber seems almost inexhaustible, but it is the last great stand of timber in America, and when the whole country begins to draw against it—in fact, when the whole world turns to Washington for its construction timber, its car building material, and its finishing lumber, it may disappear as rapidly as have the pine forests of Michigan and Wisconsin.
