CONSIDERATION FOR HIS SUCCESSOR.

(Cincinnati Commercial Tribune). In every mail Alfred G. Allen, of Cincinnati, receives a large number of letters asking for public documents, garden seeds and all manner of bulletins and information. He takes special pleasure in answering these requests because, unlike the majority of the new congressmen, he has to his credit in the different departments a big batch of circulars of all sorts. The majority of the other new congressmen found upon their arrival in Washington that their predecessors had used up all the garden seeds and public documents and consequently they are very much embarrassed in not being able to fulfill the requests of their constituents. Representative Gobel, of Cincinnati, who was succeeded by Allen, treated the new congressman with the greatest courtesy and left him a full share in everything. More than 42,000 farm bulletins and 15,000 packages of seeds were signed over to Allen by Gobel.

ARMCHAIR REFLECTIONS
By H. L. Spencer

A good many years ago, a young lady, a native of this province, visited me at a newspaper office in this city, seeking my advice as to the occupation in life in which she might make her most valuable contribution to herself and others. We debated the subject on several occasions, and at last she went away with the determination that in educational work and in authorship she would employ her life. Years passed before I had any intelligence of her again, and then she wrote that two or three books from her pen had been published and that she derived considerable income from their sale. I received a letter from her a few days ago, extracts from which are appended. I refrain from publishing my reflections but am rejoiced that my friend of so long ago is living so full and earnest a life—one pleasing to herself and useful to others. She writes:

My Dear Friend:
Your letter came to me this morning just as I was leaving for my daily duties. I read it in the car and again in my heart. I cannot bear to think of a friend "growing weaker every day." Let me be a robust and strong "Cheer up! Cheer up! Cheer up—cheer up! Cheer up!" You will feel better when there is real sunshine in the air. It is cold, so cold here—for April—I have known it to be warmer in March. I want you to keep well and be able to talk to me next summer when I expect to pass through St. John and visit relatives there for a few days. I am going to New Brunswick and Nova Scotia for the summer. My mother was over eighty when she "went out" but she never seemed old because her mind was so clear and active. My mother was a Peters, descended from the old Loyalists. Peterses, Cornwalls, Westons, Yemans and I know not how many other old Loyalist families contributed to her wisdom and her strength. We, the descendants of the United Empire Loyalists have always been so proud.

You speak of King Square. Is it at the heart of King Street, across Colby street? I find that I do not remember St. John very well. I used to visit my relatives the Haskays who lived on Colby street, and think that that street ran into a little park at the head or top of King street. I was in St. John for a day and night four years ago this coming summer—and I remember how very beautiful the view of the bay was as seen between the houses as one looked down entire streets. It was at sunset and the coloring was exquisite. I shall never forget that wonderful marine framed by street walls.

I include one of the children of Easter greetings painted by the children in one of the schools I visit and send me with their Easter wishes. The children in our public schools now receive free of charge instruction superior to what I used to pay dearly for as a special instruction received in private classes. It is remarkable what artistic work we can get from them.

In English the children are also taught the principles of education and they compose verses descriptive of nature subjects and other things. I have seen such a way as to be really worth while. Some time I will send you some examples of the children's little poems and you may hand on any just now but I use some in my office. I think perhaps they will interest you. Next summer I am to have a Child Welfare Exhibit here. Every school in the city is to be represented by groups of children. I shall have groups of children with their teachers at work in drawing with pencil, charcoal, ink and water color. Other groups working in clay and in leather and other kinds of handicrafts. There will also be classes engaged in woodwork, sewing, cookery, etc. and I must not forget the printing. A school which I am to visit tomorrow is to take a whole printing outfit to the place of exhibition and be at work all afternoon and evening during the thirteen days I will send you further accounts of the exhibit if it will interest you.

I pray for you and best wishes for I believe in both doing one's friends good I remain sincerely yours,

THE PRIMITIVE WEAPON OF THE PATAGONIANS.

In pre-que days, terminating with the Spanish invasion, these sons of the pampas lived a much more athletic existence; for today the Tehuelche, like the gaucho, will not walk a hundred yards if his horse is close at hand, and it usually is. To the horse is probably due the disappearance of the sling and the bow and arrow, as well as the more prevalent use of that unique and characteristic weapon of the pampas, the boleadoras, or bolas.

This consists of two or three rawhide-covered balls, connected by rawhide, to be swung around the head, and hurled from the saddle by one of the balls, slightly egg-shaped, called the mollita, or hand-ball, with the result that the quarry is entangled around the legs, and incidentally struck and pounded by the balls themselves. The more primitive bolas were round stones, to which rawhide guanaco thongs were attached in a groove. Later these were covered with rawhide for horses, and the lines doubled, and now many bolas feature are filled with shot or iron. Three-tailed bolas are used for horses, while two balls serve for ostrich and sometimes guanaco, which are lashed about the neck. A single ball, called the bola perdida (lost ball), which is attached to a long line, was used as a hurling-stone, was undoubtedly the most primitive form of this formidable weapon.

Indolence, a man on foot, for the obvious reason that they must be taught not to fear a man coming thus, this precaution enabling a lone dismounted man to approach his horse—Charles W. Furlong, F. R. G. S., in Harper's Magazine for May.
