She was haplized about two years later by Rev. Bennet Taylor, and united with the Baytist church at New Germany. A few years afterwards she removed to Bridgewater, where she has continued to reside ever since. Her life was marked by a quiet devotion to the interests of her household and family. In her religious life she was unobtrasive, but the daily tenor of her life was marked by a quiet devotion to the interests of her household and family, which no words could have produced; as is apparent by the fact that all professed religion. Among her last utterances were these: "I love Jeans." "I trust Jeans." "If the she repeated with great emphasis, and all the strength which in her paralysed condition, remained with her. She will be greatly missed for her kindly diffusion times of sicures and sorrow. The services were conducted by Revda. Measrs. Dodge, Ferry (Presbyterian) and March.
