A MOTOR WAGGON USED BY SOME 300 ONTARIO FARMERS FOR MILK DELIVERY IN TORONTO. The story is told in this issue of how most of the leading farmers living near Toronto, who sell their milk in that city, after years of unsatisfactory dealings with the milk vendors, finally formed their own company and undertook to sell direct to the consumers. This illustration shows one of their wagons which is used to deliver milk to their wholesale customers, such as hospitals and hotels, which buy in large quantities. Read what these men have accomplished, and thus find what farmers can do when they try.
