The Life Insurance Underwriters' Association of will probably be re-built immediately. New York and six similar organizations are opposing vigorously the proposed amendment to the Armstrong insurance law of 1807 to permit the Metro-politan and Prudential Insurance Companies to in-manager of the Manufacturers' Life Insurance Comto pass the bill a party of 100 insurance managers R. Gooderham the managing director. and salesmen are at Albany to be present for the ommittee's final meeting to-day.

The amendment, introduced on behalf of the Metropolitan and Prudential companies, it is contended by the underwriters, would greatly weaken the important restrictions imposed and might mean their disintegration upon deferring the payment of dividends and expenditures of mutual or participating companies. The Metropolitan and Prudential did not come under the law when passed, but by their not come under the law when passed, but by their recent mutualization they do now. They should, it The amendment, introduced on behalf of the Metis claimed, be given no special relief from a provision of the law intended to enforce economy just because it would, as applied to them now, actually enforce at £361,000, which compares with a total of only economy. It would be peculiar were the Legislature £91,200 in January and of £203,600 in February last to modify and impair at their request a law, the usefulness of which is now conceded by all mutual and participating companies. The expense reduction required of the Metropolitan and Prudential would not, it is stated, exceed 2 to 5 per cent, of their ordinary

The two companies also wish an amendment to section 84, which would remove the present require ment that industrial policy dividences be payable an-They ask authorization to defer paymen for five years and give a part of the dividend at least is an addition to the policy, without the privilege of taking it in cash. The underwriters contend that less than 10 per cent. of industrial policies remain in force five years. Thus, they assert, many poor people would be deprived of their dividends, and as very few maintain their policies until death few would realize the additions to their policies

The Case For the Companies.

A memorandum prepared by the Metropolitan and Prudential insurance companies covering their stand, declares that "the bill is opposed by agents of the namely, to compel the Metropolitan and Fundential to charge higher premiums and to discontinue the use of certain low premium policies."

The companies say that agents and representatives of the other companies freely admit that they fear the competition of low premiums of the Metropolitan and Prudential, allowed under the proposed bill, and 58} that such competition would lead their own com 181 panies to issue cheap policies and cut down their commissions. The Metropolitan and Prudential as-sert on the other hand, however, that the passage of the bill will lead to cheaper insurance, "the cost of insurance by participating companies being unreasonably high" and based on a mortality table absojutely inconsistent with the facts, higher than companies are experiencing.

124 "As the law now stand..."
1484 "no new mutual life insurance company can be started in this state. The simple fact is that the bill cure an injustice, prevents an increase of premiums, puts all mutual companies upon the same plans and invites the formation of new ones. Any charge that the passage of the bill will result in raids upon the agency forces of other companies and unreasonable rate-cutting is negatived by the fact that both the Metropolitan and the Prudential now write all the business every year that the law permits and that no temptation whatever to attack other companies 1021 or their business or agency staffs exists."

The Metropolitan and Prudential contend that the bill is not designed to increase expenses nor will they be increased. Its sole aim, they say, is to prevent the necessity of raising their premiums to the public decreasing commissions to agents. and decreasing commissions to agents. These com missions are now lower than those paid by other participating companies and the2 two companies hold '9 that it would be a gross injustice for the Legislature to penalize them for mutualizing and turning ove their assets to the policyholders by refusing to pass 791 the bill.

When the case started some time ago, it created considerable interest in marine circles in view, not only on account of the wreck concerned, but the curious circumstances surrounding the case. The insurance companies interested had the metal turned over to them by the shippers after paying the loss, to do whatever they could with.

The Salvage Company was called into service and recovered the silver. This done, the underwriters were willing to pay them their expenses, but nothing more, for the raising of the silver.

The Canadian Salvage Company also salved the mails, for which they received $10,000 from the post office, recovered a number of bodies, and brought to the surface the purser's strong box, for which they were paid $35,000 by the Canadian Pacific Railway.
