THE DEAD EDITOR. Interesting Information About W. F. Storey, of the Chicago Times.

One of the strange ambitions of Mr. Storey's declining years was to erect for himself a magnificent residence of proportions and elegance so great as to entitle it to be called a palace.

As is well known he started upon this unliking some years ago, and the mammoth white marble edifice, still unfinished, though having cost him hundreds and thousands of dollars in its construction, remains down on Vincennes avenue to testify of his strange desire.

In personal appearance Mr. Storey was tall and always neatly dressed. His hair was abundant and snowy white. His forehead was high and his hazel eyes clear and bright. As a journalist Mr. Storey had a clear, concise, and very forcible style. He was more of a paragraphist than essayist. In his editorials he often repeated the prominent idea again and again, each time with verbiage so forcible yet different that the effect was like that of the repeated blows of a battering ram, as many of them who have felt the force of them can testify. Even his enemies, and they were many, attest to his remarkable ability as a journalist.

For many years he was an indefatigable worker. He almost lived in his office. The first man at work in the morning, he was frequently the last man to leave at night. He was a master of the business, and he gave to every detail his personal attention. He organized his staff for work and not for ornament. He was the sole head. There were chiefs of departments, but no one employee could lord it over another. Every one could appeal to the "old man," and a boy was quite as apt to be listened to patiently as an old member of the staff.

Considering his disposition Mr. Storey often exhibited a singularly considerate nature. He would believe implicitly whatever was told him, and sometimes he was misled by designing men before taking decisive action. He would not confer the title of managing editor upon any employee until his own failing health made it absolutely necessary that there should be an active and responsible chief. When he started an evening paper in 1876 he attempted to manage that also as he had his morning paper, but finding the task too onerous, he at length in brief notes, informed the various heads of departments that he had appointed a manager for the evening paper. He took good care, however, to explain that he was not the manager of the morning paper.

So implacable were his hatreds that he neither forgot nor forgave an injury. The patient sufferer, the vigilant lion Of him who treasures up a wrong, found in him the fullest exemplification. The general who suppressed his newspaper for treasonable utterances during the war, the belle opera actress who, assisted by some some of her retainers, assaulted him on the street, the judge who committed him to jail for contempt, the gambler with whom he had a shooting affray on Randolph street, the physician who attended his second wife in her fatal illness, and a score of others, who at one time and another crossed his path, were never lost sight of. At first he assailed them unmercifully, and at last, having pursued them to his heart's content, he gave orders that their names should never again be mentioned in his paper, unless they did or did something irreparable. His few friendships were rare and lasting.

THE U. S. ELECTIONS. Since 1876 there has not been such excitement in the result of the United States elections as there was in the late contest. For days the "State of Doubt" has held the result trembling in the balance. The following summing up by Chairman Gorman of the Democratic National Commission appears to be the latest by mail.

A DEMOCRATIC SUMMING UP. Chairman Gorman, of the Democratic National Commission, sent the following despatch to Governor John Lee Carroll, of Maryland, this evening: "The claim of the National Republican Commission is lost, and by everybody it is conceded that we have carried New York beyond question. Manning, chairman of the State Committee, tells the public to-day that the board of canvassers will see that the will of the people is observed. The Republicans are trying hard to prevent an official announcement of the vote of New York, which is for Cleveland. We have the State by a small but safe plurality."

219 VOTES. The Democratic National Committee have issued an address which states to "the people of New York and the United States" that Cleveland and Hendricks are elected with 219 electoral votes. The address names the States which have given Democratic majorities, including New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, Indiana, and West Virginia.

The Herald and World continued to show large though considerably reduced majorities for Cleveland. The Herald's latest bulletin at 10 o'clock stated that the returns from Albany up to that hour showed Cleveland 500 ahead in the State, and the crowd who filled the street in front cheered that announcement again and again.

A DETERMINED STAND. ALBANY, Nov. 7.—The Argus says:—No fraudulent commission will be let put Haines in the White House or keep Cleveland out of it. The man who attempts it will be killed.
