

J. H. MATHIESON.

Dr. J. H. Mathieson, one of St. Mary's best known citizens, died suddenly on 10th May. He was in his seventy-first year, and for some time had retired from the practice of medicine. Latterly he was in poor health. On the forenoon he went to his office stating that he would return for his dinner. When he did not come Mrs. Mathieson went to his office and found her husband sitting in his arm chair with life extinct. He had been dead about an hour.

Dr. Mathieson was born at Embro, and was a graduate of McGill University, coming to St. Mary's as a young man. In the forty years he resided there he took an active interest in public affairs, among other things serving as an Alderman. His widow and one son survive him.

A. MILTON BEEMAN.

Dr. Milton I. Beeman, well known through Lennox and Addington for 40 years as a medical practitioner, and for many years prominent in municipal and Masonic circles, died 10th May, at his home Newburgh from the effects of a paralytic stroke sustained some months ago. He was nearly sixty three years of age. For many years he was a member of the Provincial Board of Health, also a Major of the 47th Regiment.

Dr. Beeman took an active part in every movement calculated to enhance the interests of the community, and was highly respected throughout the surrounding country. His widow, four daughters and two sons survive.

G. W. HURLBURT.

Dr. Hurlburt, of Thorbury, Ontario, died on 12th May at his home there. He was seventy-seven years of age. He was well known throughout a wide range of country around his home, and was a highly esteemed practitioner.

GEORGE H. CHRISTIE.

Dr. George H. Christie, son of the late Dr. Thomas Christie, who was assistant surgeon at Point St. Charles, Que., during the ship fever epidemic of 1847-48, died at his home in Lachute, Que., on 12th May. He is survived by his wife and four children.