The anti-Catholic press of Germany has lately become far more virulent in its language and outspoken in its hatred of the Church. It also talks triumphantly of the mission of the new Protestant Empire, which is to be the subversion of Catholicism. Now, though we do not credit these exponents of a premediated State policy, yet there can be no doubt but that the tone of the Masonic press points to some apparent change for the worse in diplomatic animus towards the Church, and to the furious onslaught which the Revolution is everywhere preparing to make upon her. The offer of the Pope to mediate between Germany and France has excited general enthusiasm amongst the French Catholics, who are now only anxious for internal tranquility to enable them to express their gratitude to the Father of the Fathful by rescuing him from his oppressors. Their enthusiasm is not likely to be weakened by the report that Pius IX, has gone still further, and made representations to the German Emperor, with the object of porsunding the conqueror to restore Alsace and Lorraine to France.

A STRANGE TRAGEDY. - The Rome (Ga.) Chroniele publishes a rumor of a terrible tragedy in St. Clair county, Alabama. It appears that a band of disguised men broke into the house of the tax-collector of that county, who was from home at the time and demanded the amount of the taxes from his wife. She refused to give it up or tell where it was. After attempting in vain to force her to tell the hiding place of the treasure, they searched for it. After possessing themselves firmly of the money. they ordered her to get them supper. While she was busying herself with this forced task, she conceived the idea of poisoning them, and thus preserving at once the money and her husband's honor. She deftly slipped some arsenic in the coffee she was mixing. They drank heartily and fell dead shortly afterward. She stripped the disguises off, and found that two of the villains were strangers, but the third was her husband who had taken this means of stealing the taxes of the people.

You may judge, therefore, the effect of the Cups when I inform you that she can now read every portion of the Tribune, even the small diamond type without her glasses; you can not imagine her pleasure.

The business is beginning to assume something like form and shape. Have inquiries from all directions, and often great distances, in regard to the nature of Cups and plan of treatment. Whereever I go with them they create intense excitement. But a few words are necessary to enlist an attentive audience, anywhere that people can be found. I was at our fair last Tuesday, 27th inst., and can safely say that I myself (or rather the Eye Cups) was no mean portion of the attraction of the occasion. I sold and effected sales liberally. They will make money, and make it fast, too; no small catch-penny affair, but a superb, No. 1 tip-top business, that promises, so far as I can see, to be life long.
