

Time period

The case study will address the length of time it might take to implement the measure (e.g. to negotiate the voluntary agreement, or have legislation in place for standards); and when the effects of the measure are likely to be realised: now, to the year 2000, 2005, 2010 and 2020. This section will address whether measures are expected to give short-term emission reduction only, long-term emission reduction potential only, or a mixture of short and long term effects (for example a measure may have some effect on emissions in the short term but much greater effect in the longer term).

Impact on other countries

The impact of the measure on non-Annex I countries and non-participating Annex I countries, in terms of costs, trade impacts, greenhouse gas reduction, social, environmental and other impacts will be assessed to the extent possible.

Conclusion

The conclusion will focus on whether the measure is a good candidate for common action and why.
