

- fleet, iii. 68; his failure, iii. 69; his exaltation, iii. 75; on the repulse of the English at Montmorenci, iii. 76; orders Bourlamaque to abandon Ticonderoga and Crown Point, iii. 80; on Amherst's capture of Ticonderoga, iii. 82; on the capture of Niagara, iii. 91; on the destruction of St. Francis, iii. 101; denounces English atrocities, iii. 105; his own atrocities, iii. 105; sees his mistake, iii. 107; breathes more freely, iii. 109; grows confident, iii. 117; saves Vergor from disgrace, iii. 122; iii. 128; on Wolfe's ascent of the Heights of Abraham, iii. 130; delays sending his forces to join Montcalm's, iii. 136; his arrival on the battlefield carefully timed, iii. 145; throws the blame for defeat on Montcalm, iii. 145; his consternation, iii. 146; cowardice of, iii. 147; on the French loss in the battle of Quebec, iii. 149; on Bougainville's force, iii. 149; loses an opportunity, iii. 150; abandons Quebec to its fate, iii. 151; iii. 152; his flight, iii. 154; his letters to Ramsay, iii. 154, 155; agrees to the plans of Lévis, iii. 157; the loss of Quebec due to, iii. 160; his jealous spite follows Montcalm even after death, iii. 162-167; retires to Montreal, iii. 162; blames Ramsay for the surrender of Quebec, iii. 162; the corruptions of his government, iii. 164; Montcalm's accusations against, iii. 167; his trial, iii. 167; reproaches for, iii. 174; on the capture of Le Calvaire, iii. 182; hopes to recover Quebec, iii. 185; his plans for attacking Quebec, iii. 185, 186; on the battle of Ste-Foy, iii. 204; exerts himself for defence, iii. 207; issues a counter-proclamation, iii. 212; promises of, iii. 213; Lévis' relations with, iii. 213; on Amherst's expedition against Canada, iii. 214; his letter to Langlade, iii. 218; holds a council of war, iii. 219; offers to capitulate, iii. 219; negotiations, iii. 219; Amherst inexorable, iii. 219; accepts the English terms, iii. 220; reproved by the government, iii. 222; had no choice but to surrender, iii. 223; his good qualities, iii. 223; returns to France, iii. 230; arrested, iii. 231; his trial, iii. 232; acquitted, iii. 232; asks for pensions for Contrecoeur and Ligneris, iii. 270; on the force at Quebec, iii. 285; on the battle of Quebec, iii. 287.
- Vaudreuil, Philippe de, governor of Canada, ii. 52.
- Vaudreuil, Vicomte de, brother of the governor, iii. 222.
- Vauquelin, in command of the "Aréthuse" at Louisbourg, ii. 268; iii. 186, 202.
- Vauvert, ii. 52.
- Venango, Indian town of, Washington at, i. 138; English trading-house at, i. 138; seized by the French, i. 138; Joneaire in command, i. 138; ii. 110, 368, 369; iii. 87; burned by the French, iii. 90.
- Vendôme, i. 12.
- Verchères, M. de, at Fort Frontenac, i. 78.
- Vergor, Captain Duchambon de, asked by Duquesne to find a