

And the hoarse breath of boreas
Dismast thee no more.

Your tarpawl and watchcoat
No longer you'll wear,
But robes of bright glory
All shining and fair ;
A crown on thy head that
Will dazzle the sun,
And from glory to glory
Eternally run.

FINIS.

587