

Luck-armann, a plenary, a dwarf
Lunn, penetrate, a heaving billow, &c.

M

Mac-fruid, sulair, the gannet, a voracious fowl or person
Mac-lunhach, cat-mara, grlasach, the fish called a sea-devil
Mahnenn, matins, morning prayers or devotions
Maihdeanna, a maiden, an instrument for rehearsing with Maoil-ciaran, a child of grief, melancholy
Marsail, marsadh, a march, or marching of troops
Mathalt, a blunt sword, knife, or other weapon
Meardrach, meter, cramo (Irish id.)
Mealag, belly, protuberance
Meira-casach, active, nimble, vigorous
Meirge, a banner, flag, pennon
Meilheag, meilbhag, a corn-poppay
Mhan, slas, downward, from above
Mophann, sounds of musical instruments
Muirceadach, female fighter or champion, an undaunted female
Muirichinn, children, inmates, occupants of one house
Muirnein, (Irish id.) darling, or beloved
Munadh, a hill or hillock, (used poetically for munadh)

O

Olach, an eunuch, a fumbler, &c., &c.
Olachd, hospitality, kindness, bounty
Oraid, an oration, a speech, an essay
Orda, shining like gold, gilded, excellent, precious

P

Pais, a slap, a blow with the open hand, a box on the ear
Peighinn, a measure of land (not now in use)
Pigidh, bru-daeurg, robin red-breast
Piathach, splay-footed, handy-legged
Prabhach, botching, bungling, spoiling
Prabar, the rabble, the refuse of any grain or seed
Prais, praiseach, a pot or pot-metal, a still Priobartach, parsimony, meanness, shabbiness
Prioblagadh, a sudden burning or sense of heat, a twinkling blaze
Pthar, a wound or hurt, a scar
Puic, bethe, well, cha tug a puic dheth, he made nothing of him

R

Rannannan, title deeds, deeds of conveyance, chattels

Rannar-buth, a confused dance without system

Rati, a ludicrous appellation made to signify whisky

Riathraibh, outbreaking, immorality, eruption

Riataich, dolain, illegitimate

Robain, towering waves, swelling roaring billows, heavy rains

Roiscil, the lowest and basest rabble, a high swelling wave

Ro-scot, the highest of a ship's sails, top-gallants, full sails

Rooig, prose writhing, an eye, eyelids
Rutanach, firm, force, steadfast, stony

S

Samh, surge, the agitation of waves on the sea beach, the crest of whitened billows

Seoil, a seal, a mark, an impression

Saradh, a broaching, a distracting, an arrestment

Seadair, rest, repose, comfort, pallet, pillow, a place whereon to rest

Seas-ghrian, the equinoctial line

Seis, a musical air, the humming of bees or flies

Seis, one's match, or equal, a companion

Seighin, rare, superior, out of the common order, eccentric

Seol-nih, an anchorage, a harbour

Sgalache, a man ready to raise the human cry against his neighbour

Sgibidh, flight, active, handsome, neat

Sgthirach, a clumsy person, a slattern, a female taitler, a young sea gull

Staidy, toisil, rheumatism, rheumatic pain

Stiagideach, dwarfish, bony, ill-made

Sibh, a span, a squint, determined position in standing

Siomachan, bioman, phosphoric fire

Slan, a defence, a garrison, a protection

Smeoil, Gen. of Smail, Gleam-smoil, the gleam of mist

Smeocrin, the end of an arrow next the bow-string

Snaicis, a split of dried fish, &c., &c.

Sorn, a hearth, the flue of a kiln or oven, a conceality

Spangann, spangles, glittering toys, decorations, embellishments

Spaoch, a dart, virus, a blow or thrust, a wasp

Spreidh, or spreigh, velocity, gallant movement, gilding

Srianach, a halberd, a brock

Stairbhanach, an athletic well-built person

Staoag, ronnan, saliva, spittles

Stral, tumours, swail (Ir. id), wonder

Suchte, filled, saturated, lightened

Sumaire, a coarse cudgel, a lethal weapon, a beetle

Siennail, a likeness, a comparison, a resemblance

T

Tarbharaach, fruinneach, noisy, garrulous

Tafaid, the string of a bow for throwing arrows

Tairdeant, a journey, a travel, a march, a voyage

Taobhlath, a division of a pipe tune

Targanach, a prognostication, a prophesying

Tairneanach, or feallsanach, a philosopher, or astronomer

Teannair, season, in season, fit time

Teiridneach, ceiridneach, medicinal, having the cure to cure

Teadach, cowardice, cowardliness

Theasail, chaohail, dh'eug, he died, thead e

Tobha, bill, rop, rope, cable

Toghalt, a feud, a levying of forces, a struggle in arms

Tolmheall, sensible, prudent, frugal

Totair, an attack in battle, a warlike movement, a flock of water fowls

Tuairneach, a thick elegant man, a dense column of smoke

Tuairneach, a deep snoring or sleep

Tuasn, an onset, beginning, prologue

Tuagair, messenger, harbinger, ambassador

Treabhair, tighcan, houses, outhouses, stables

Treughaid, a stitch in one's side, &c., &c.

Trinillinn, no trealainn, nonsensical stuff, jugglers

Trogadh, raog-trogadh, soft rolling eyes, full-orbed

Troidh, Troy, an ancient city which baffled the united efforts of all Greece for ten years

Troag, a cod, in Sutherlandshire a fool

Tuairneach, a round knob or small cup

Tuairneach, a rattling or rumbly noise

Tuairneach, nodding, a sudden jerk from the cessation of sleep

Tuinn, tion, of tohn, a hillock, a mound, a knoll

Tuly, a grudge, an upbraiding, paking

Tullin, canvass, sea storm, a shipped wave

Tuinn, ducklings (obsolete), waves

Tuinnneis, a striking of heads against each other as rams, contact, collision

U

Uachdair, farm stock; fo uachdair, under stock

Uca, ucas, the gale or coal fish, stench (Sc.)

Ufhalteach, anecdotal, jocular, cheerful in conversation

Urian, the countenance, beauty, the fore part of a ship

Urrar, division of a pipe tune

Urracag, a throw, a ear plu, a elato

Urraigean, inundations, overflowings, spents (Sc.)