

GIRLS HAVE NOT SEEN LAVINE YET

Man Brought Here from Woodstock.

Detective Speaks of Fruitless Call to P. E. Island—Word of Several Men in Nova Scotia Held as Suspects.

Detectives Power and Donohue arrived home last night on the Boston train with George Watson Levine, who was apprehended in Woodstock and held on suspicion that he might possibly be the man wanted for the murder of little Saele McAuley. Sergeant Detective Power said that Levine answered the description given by the girls in some particulars. So far as the clothing is concerned he said he was of the opinion that Levine had made a change and that he had had his hair cut. The three little girls will be brought to the police station today to see if they can identify the man.

Detective Biddiscombe arrived home yesterday afternoon from Tignish, P. E. I., where he had been summoned to arrest a man suspected of being the murderer. He said the man was too old and was able to prove an alibi. A telegram was received this morning from Sydney saying that they were holding a man there. The suspect was said to be between thirty-five and forty years of age. The local detectives say that he is evidently not the right man as he is too old.

Men are also held at Mahone Bay and Glouce Bay and photographs of them are to be forwarded to the local detectives. Photographs of a young man held in Port Egin have arrived and will be shown to the girls today for identification.

From a local standpoint nothing new developed this morning, but there were rumors current about the city that some clothing had been found in the vicinity of the crime. The detectives said that they had not received any such information.

SWINDLERS GET HIM ON OLD TRICK

Montreal, Aug. 27.—Victims of a confidence trick, Andrew Case of Lachine, lost $2,000 in cash on Fletcher's Field, and though one of the two men accused by him was caught, the money was not recovered.

Casa said that he had met the two men in the morning and had told them that $2,000 he wished to invest. They explained a proposition to him and he agreed to pool his money with theirs in a tin box. They left him soon afterwards and Casa examined the box which he found to contain only some old newspapers and about $10 in cash.

He called for the police, and the two men who were still in possession of the tin box fled in opposite directions. One was captured and is held on a charge of theft.

NIETZSCHE IN DISCARD

Frederick Nietzsche, who before the war was sort of oracle in Germany, and allied countries, is now very much in the discard, and his works, that were once eagerly read, are mainly to be found on second-hand book shelves. The Great Blond Beat, according to this philosopher, was to come out of Germany to devour all that lay before him. It seems to have been chained, and the world breathes more freely.

Nietzsche died seaman, and with his death his ideas seemed to suffer collapse. Nevertheless, a traveler who bought one of his books at second hand read on a railway journey found him still original and adequate, although outdated. He quotes some of the sayings that once ran from lip to lip in Germany: "An evil conscience is a disease." "Atheism and a sort of second innocence are bound together." "Christianity is called the religion of pity. Pity is in opposition to the tonic affections which elevate the energy of the will; hence it acts in a depressive manner. One loses strength if one sympathizes."

Nietzsche is particularly hard on conscience. He says: "The remorse of conscience is indecent." Perhaps, after all, it is a consoling sign to find Nietzsche on the second-hand book stall, scathed like the conception of the Great Blond Beat.

LOUVAIN'S NEW LIBRARY

(New York Herald.) On July 29 a ceremony that ought to impress the world will be performed in the little Belgian city of Louvain. There the corner stone of the new library, the gift of the United States, which is to take place, as well as it can, of the famous library that had endured for over 500 years, and was wiped out in a day by the Germans will be laid.

Former President Poincare of France will deliver the address to an audience of statesmen, soldiers, diplomats, college presidents and professors, a king or two, and a queen or two, the mighty ones of the earth by virtue of position, nationality, wealth, or for any other dominating reason.

But the figure that will stand out, no matter who else is there, is that of Cardinal Mercier, the hero-saint of Belgium. And next to him, or even side by side with him, will stand in the esteem of the world King Albert of Belgium.

There still remain many an enigma of the war. Among them is this one: Why did the Germans, as they bombarded and burned little Louvain, not only sweep their line of fire toward the Cloth Market from the railway district in order to destroy the world-famous library? And another puzzle whose meaning is lost in the intricacies of Teutonic psychology is: Why did the Germans, after they had laid waste the burning library to prevent enthusiasts who were willing to risk their lives from dashing in to save some of the books?

Not a book, of all the treasury of Louvain, was saved.
