

An Object of Pity

That part of our nature which we call the emotional is much more highly developed in women than in men. They are more sensitive, more tender, more sympathetic, more pronounced in their likes and dislikes, more susceptible to the extremes of pleasure and pain, and these qualities make them more than men, objects of pity.

The continued existence of the human race depends upon the normal functioning of the organs of the body. If these organs become diseased or disordered, the source of suffering is created. The source of suffering is created, and the source of suffering is created, and the source of suffering is created.

The remedy known as ORANGE LILY is a powerful antiseptic, and it is absorbed into the blood vessels. It acts as a purifier, and it acts as a purifier, and it acts as a purifier.

Dear Mrs. Currah—All very grateful to ORANGE LILY for the change it has made in my life. When I commenced its use eight months ago I felt I would be cured before the year was over. The pain I suffered from the stomach, for death, and besides I would have such fits of depression and nervous twitching that I would have to be carried to bed. I had been in this condition for over two years, and had also used both the Pierce and Planklin medicines, but none of them seemed to reach my case. I felt some improvement after the first use of ORANGE LILY and have kept gaining ever since. I do not feel that I am entirely well, I sleep well, and feel cheerful and happy, except that I have some nervous twinges, and I feel that I am not quite as strong as I was before. I am not sure, but I think I am getting better. I am not sure, but I think I am getting better. I am not sure, but I think I am getting better.

Free to all Sufferers

In order to enable every woman suffering from any form of female disorder to test the merits of ORANGE LILY, I will send to everyone who will send me ten days' treatment, absolutely free. As this is worth $25, it is only because I know that it will give relief to make this free trial offer. Further, if any woman wishes expert medical advice, and will write me a full description of her case, I will submit same to the staff of the Chonley Medical Institute, Detroit, Mich., and they will write her a full prescription without expense to her. Write 2-CEN'S STAMPS and address MRS. FRANCES E. CURRAH, WINDSOR, ONT.

$801,000,000 ON DEPOSIT IN THE CANADIAN BANKS

The Canadian bank statement for August was highly satisfactory, for, while the banks increased their business loans by $5,000,000 and note circulation by $2,500,000, the outflow of money was offset by an increase of nearly $2,000,000 in deposits, which now total $801,000,000.

Call and short loans in Canada increased by $246,740, while similar loans made by Canadian banks abroad were reduced by $1,988,729.

Current loans in Canada, representing the banks' advances to business enterprises, stood at $67,815,770 on August 31, an increase during the month of $4,890,431.

The Montreal Gazette Discusses the Recent Eucharistic Congress and the Challenge of Father Vaughan—Much to be Learned by Both Protestants and Catholics

(Montreal Gazette.)

There seems to be a disposition on the part of some of the doctors of Protestantism to accept the challenge of Father Vaughan, and for the most part (in Montreal, at least), it has been accepted in a generous and tolerant spirit. Protestantism likes to claim an important share in the diffusion of the spirit of civil and religious liberty. On the other hand, we are often reminded that it was in a Roman Catholic colony (that of Maryland), that the New World found the first example of religious freedom. Nor must we forget to honor the memory of that great-hearted and saintly man, Roger Williams, James the Second offered his people franchises which they suspected and declined, and that Protestant patriot, Thomas Davis, has defended this Irish policy as that of a tolerant prince. Whatever be the value of these claims, the behavior of the dynasty which displaced the banished Stuarts towards those whose religious views agreed with James's was not tolerant. It was dreadful. And here (with a kindly glance at the noble army of non-jurors, of whom the Bishop of Glasgow could doubtless have told us something) we may close our retrospect. For, in spite of the Calverts and the Howells, in our great city the Eucharistic Congress was treated not with tolerance merely, but with honor and sympathy. How, indeed, if we had regard for the reputation of our city which we have done otherwise? Those of us who take pride in Montreal's history and traditions, know under what auspices and with what hopes it was founded, and have again and again seen the noblest of its sons, its priests, its men-at-arms and fearless explorers, in opening up this continent to Pacific, to Hudson's Bay, to the Gulf of Mexico. But Montreal also owes a good deal to the newcomers of later generations, and not the least of the gifts identified with the city is the great boon of constitutional liberty, won eventually by the combined efforts of both sections of our people. We cannot hope that the organizers of the Eucharistic Congresses, in connection with them, the fulfillment of the noblest of our city's high unimagined change in the institutions and life of the old lands. Some of those who were present at the Congress, the success of the congress did not, we may suppose, contemplate the fulfillment of the yearnings and prayers of faithful Roman Catholics, and the success of such a religious revolution as within the probabilities or they would, perhaps, have withheld their hands. Nearly a dozen generations of Christians pray for the unity of the Church, but always with an undertone of aspiration as to the real value of the creed and worship of the restored temple. The Church of which the Pope is head, the Church of which the Pope is head, the Church of which the Pope is head.

inner secrets of a certain class in this city than any man living. Following his conviction many of those who formerly looked upon the friendship of the lawyer as an acquisition worth having, turned their backs on him and averted their faces when he walked by. He seemed to do so in his forthcoming book, Humelet could cover some very ornate reputations with the aim of the gutter and make New York too hot a place for them in which to live. Since he has been abandoned, and to slight profit of law the legal obligation of keeping inviolable their confidences is no longer binding on him. The little book, however, has been thrown any mud, but the knowledge that he has the ammunition with which to encompass their social and business undoing is disquieting to many of his old clients. The publication of the book is therefore awaited with absorbing interest.

Helping Clara Morris

Through the generosity of those who admired her in the zenith of her fame as an actress, Clara Morris, now a half-blind and harassed by privation, will be spared the added humiliation and hardship of eviction from her old home on the Hudson. Because of her physical infirmities the once popular star has for years been unable to work at her profession and has been obliged to depend for her living upon her earnings as a special writer, which have always been precarious and uncertain. In this plight she was unable to meet the interest on mortgages on the Hudson River home she bought in her days of affluence. The Farmers' Loan & Trust Company, which had advanced her the money, were proceeding against her six months ago to enforce the payment of the money due. The sale of the property, which is worth $20,000 and against which there are claims of $20,000 has been postponed several times to enable the friends and admirers of the actress to raise money to liquidate the incumbrance. Of the sum needed $15,000 has already been subscribed, and it is expected that the additional $5,000 will be forthcoming in a few days. The sum required is being loaned through the aid of the Friends of Clara Morris, who have organized for the purpose known as the Clara Morris Holding Company.

Fortune Almost Gone

After all, Laura Biggar, who once upon a time and a large stage following, is not going to profit much from her clandestine marriage with Henry M. Bennett, the so-called "millionaire," who left a will bequeathing to her most of the large fortune of which he was reputed to be possessed. When Bennett died the world was surprised to learn for the first time that the piquant chancery, who was some thirty-five years his junior, was his wife. Heirs of the deceased were not slow to assert their inheritance of the bulk of his estate setting up many claims in opposition to the aged man into marrying her for the purpose of spiriting his property away from him. The fight, which has been carried on with increasing bitterness for seven years in the courts of Pennsylvania, New Jersey and New York, is at last about to be decided. The estate of the deceased is valued at $1,000,000 and the claim of the wife is for $500,000. The fact that they are barely sufficient to satisfy the claims of the creditors, and the outside demands are recognized by the court the estate will be insolvent, leaving the aged man into marrying her for the purpose of spiriting his property away from him. To Restrict Emigration

That oft-emphasized but as oft-decried demand for the restriction of emigration at this port has been recently revived by certain elements in the city, and is threatening to make trouble for the mayor's commission, which is trying to devise ways and means of improving the condition of the residents of the crowded section of this city. Among the labor unions this demand has been most insistent, some of the organizations which claim to feel most the competition of the cheap and unskilled labor of Russia and Poland even going so far as to advocate the complete suspension of all emigration for a term of years. Equally imprudent in another way are those members of the Liberal Emigration League who feel that the present restrictions are unduly exacting and that they should be modified so as to encourage still further emigration. Strong arguments have been made on both sides of the vexed question, and it is regarded as highly probable that the commission will leave it where it now stands. At most, it is a difficult problem to solve and stir up class hatred. With an important state election approaching, this will not be esteemed to be good politics.

Restraint from Spending

Troubles are accumulating for Mrs. Julia M. Morris, who inherited some $300,000 from a maiden aunt several years ago and allowed such inactivity to take care of it that relatives had a committee appointed to look after her. The woman, who is a confirmed dipsomaniac, started in to dissipate her large fortune in excesses, and until she was restrained from spending her enormous income she scattered it about with a prodigal hand. She recently refused to help support her daughter, Hilda Charlotte Edgerton Morris, by her husband's marriage, and the supreme court the other day upon the recommendation of a referee appointed to take testimony in the case, ordered that the mother's private yacht be sold to pay for the girl's schooling if no other funds were available for the purpose.

ASEPTO SOAP POWDER

sweetens the home

Is Your Home "Surgically Clean"?

THE greatest guarantee against illness—against disease—is cleanliness. Let Asepto help you keep your home clean—"surgically clean."

Ordinarily the application of soap is a mere mechanical work. When Asepto is used, it makes one's housework a course of civilization. ALL THE TIME without any additional work—both cleans the home and keeps it clean. Yet Asepto—more than merely an antiseptic—more than a germicide; it is also a soap powder—as good as the best soap on the market.

Do not get the idea, however, that Asepto is of value only as a disinfectant. It is far more than that. Try it in your washing—on anything. The way it cleanses will amaze you.

With Asepto, you don't have to rub or boil clothes—you just put them to soak in water in which Asepto has been dissolved, leave them there for a couple of hours and then rinse them and hang out to dry.

Or for washing dishes and greasy cooking utensils—use Asepto.

A single package of Asepto will make into two gallons of the best soft soap you ever used, and it will cost you only five cents, too.

Tell your grocer to include a package of Asepto with your groceries. A good grocer will tell you where to get it.

WOMAN SAVED FROM NOOSE BY PRIEST

Tells Dying Words of Her Husband, Whom She Was Accused of Slaying

Pittsburg, Sept. 22.—That a priest may testify in court as to what was told him by a dying person while the priest was not fully clothed in his vestments was the interpretation given in criminal court of Allegheny County tonight.

As a result the Rev. Father Kearney, of St. Michael's church, Braddock, went on the stand later and gave testimony which saved from the gallows Mrs. Annie Mazark, who was on trial since early morning charged with the murder of her husband, John Mazark, at their home in Braddock, on the morning of July 1 last. The jury retired at 9 o'clock tonight and returned soon with the verdict clearing the woman.

After a most bitter squabble between counsel the priest was permitted to take the stand, and gave testimony as to what took place in the death chamber while he had not the sacred stole about his neck. The priest declared that John Mazark, knowing himself to be dying, told him that he had shot himself with intent to kill, that he had been driven to the act because he had not had any work for three months, that he had been afflicted with sore feet and could not get out to work. This testimony was all the more sensational coming on the heels of that of an eleven-year-old daughter of the dead man and the accused woman.

Mrs. Mazark, the daughter, asserted that she had seen her mother with a pistol a few minutes before the fatal shot was fired and that the mother had threatened to do the shooting. The testimony of the child seemed enough to send her mother to the gallows.

She said she had been alarmed by the shot which killed her father and saw her mother trying to extinguish her father's burning shirt. The mother, she said, had warned her not to say anything about the shooting of her father.

The testimony of the priest threw the prosecution into confusion. The jury was out but a short time.

Quick and Permanent Relief from Rheumatism

It is not exposure to cold or wet that is the real cause of rheumatism—it is bad kidneys. So long as the kidneys are doing their work properly, filtering from the blood all the Uric Acid formed there from the waste products of the body, rheumatism cannot exist. It is only when the kidneys fail, and the blood becomes loaded with this Uric Acid that the slightest exposure afflicts the joints or muscles and causes agony.

Father Morrissey's No. 7 Tablets promptly relieve and permanently cure rheumatism by putting the kidneys to perfect shape for their work. Once the strengthened and purified kidneys get the Uric Acid cleared out of the blood the rheumatic pains disappear. If they ever show symptoms of returning a few No. 7 Tablets will tone up the kidneys up again and keep you free from the dreaded rheumatism.

Father Morrissey's No. 7 Tablets have proved their value in hundreds of cases where other remedies have failed entirely.
