herself as she prepared for bed. "I must turn over a new leaf. Tomorrow is my birthday. I can't afford to turn sour and old-maidish at twenety-one. When I go back to the office on Monday morning I'll be more pleasant and make friends with the other girls. I've been living too much in dreams of the part of the card in her hand and looked about inquiringly. "Jane—little Jane Williams—don't you know me?" demanded the new boarder.

Something new and wonderful bounded through severally been was dressed in pink tulle all spatted with paper stars, and there were pink candles on the birthday cake. No one knew why an ordinary well-behaved and unmischievous child should do such a thing, but she suddenly decided to steal into the dining room and light the birthday cake before the party "came in."

The match sputtered and jumped. She tried to climb quickly from the chair, but the tiny flame was quicker still. In a flash the pretfy pink tarleton blazed up far above the candles, and then she forget everything in her fright until she felt some one rolling her over and over on the carpet and battering her with his coat, and that had been Willie, the cavalier of her wee girlhood.

She remembered how her mother kissed Willie and cried over him, and the had "meak-nead" will very red.

"Willie—little, Willie," she almost sobbed. "Oh, if you'd tied the flowers with pink tartleton I would have remembered."

It took him so long to tell her all about it—of his wandering with his ecceptric old grandfather from mining camp, from Mexico to Feru and Chile, of fortune made and lost and found again and of how the grandson have his name changed by the law from that of his father's family to his mother's.

And Willie had big gray eyes, just like those of the new boarder. She woke with a start. Now she knew why this man had attracted her attention. Of course the world was full of men with gray eyes. But oddly enough Jane Williams, whose hair was parted demurely in the middle and who wore her grandmather's old-fashioned locket under her plain pongee shirtwaist, realizing that the fine gray eyes of the new boarder were looking her way frequently and She tried to enalyze her feelings with the salad, and when the coffeeswith thick yet spiritless coffee — was served, she decided that it was embaratsment and not a memory which stirred her whenever the gray eyes glanced her way.

Still, at the corelision of the meal, sho climbed three uncompromising flights of poorly carpeted stairs to her hallroom and drew from her trunk her small but freasured box of photographs. There they were; the father who had died the year of her graduation; the mother who had left her alone to fight the world only twelve months before; a couple of aunts who had forgotten her in the needs and pleasures of their own children; several teachers and three girls in her class at the high school.

"Oh, Willie," she sighed contentedly from a comfortable resting place on his shoulder. "Just as if there had ever here any one else since I lit the birth—with gray eyes. There were not colors enough to go round. Some must be duplicated—and it was very cilly of her to think about Willie any more.

But when you have fine gray eyes you generally have the courage to announce your intentions, and Frederick William Grey did it so effectively that to think about Wille any more.

Doubtless he was married even now to some dusky senorita whose father owned valuable silver mines.

So she turned over and feil acleep again, not to awaken until some one tapped at her door and the maid, with new respect in her bearing, entered.

William Grey did it so effectively that Mrs. De Lancey wiped her tears on the flowing sleeve of her pink negligee and shook hands with them both. Then turning her back on the cozy corner, for once put to its legitimate use, she departed murmuring: "Well. you never can tell what sort of girl will land a man and her hair so plain and her a man. "For me? Impossible! And there the no card"

MONTREAL, June 8.—The first commander of Canada's navy, Rear Admiral Chas. S. Kingsmill, is in Montreal today, having arrived in this country on the Allan Line steamer Tunisian. His stay here will be short, as he leaves almost immediately for Ottawa to confer with the head of the marine department as to the taking "For me? Impossible! And there is no card."

She turned to the lid of the box. "Gabrielle."

The florist around the corner! Oh, it had been a cruel mistake. No one in the great city knew it was her one in the great city knew it was her of the policy he intended to pursue, but let it be understood that there would be no radical changes in the regulation or personnel of Canada's little fleet.

Rear Admiral Kingsmill will take command of the entire marine service of the Dominion, including all protections. of the Dominion, including all protec-tive cruisers and similar vessels in the government fleet.

HAZEN AFTER DOUBLE SUBSIDY FOR CENTRAL RAILWAY CONSTRUCTION

arrived here today for the purpose of pressing an application for double sub-sidy on the fifteen miles of the Central Railway from Chipman to Minto. A single subsidy of $3,200 a mile has been guaranteed and paid. However, the province claims the cost of construction has been sufficiently heavy to warrant the payment of double subsidy, which would bring the aid to $6,400 a mile. Premier Hazen saw Hon. Mr. Pugsley today and found a warm

SORANTON, Pa., June 8.—Timely varning to the mine workers of the an-hracite field in the expiration of the three-year agreement next April has been given by National President Lewis in the current issue of the United Mine Workers' Journal. He says:

"If, on the 1st day of April, 1909, the miners of the anthractte field are in a position to invite a reduction, then do not be surprised if it is offered, and the acceptance or rejection will devolve upon the men.

MINISTERS BY WEIGHT AND MEASURE

The new British Ministry is entitled to be regarded as at once the young-est, the lightest, and the shortest on record. It is not light in the featherbrain sense, and it is not the shortes in the duration sense. The two dis-tinctions are in the standard of its cor-poreal weight and its measure per foot. The new premier, Mr. Asquith, is in the very prime of life himself, and his four new "firsts" are just below him in time measure as well as in avoirdupois and in cubits.
