Archbishop Bond Passed A Montreal Yesterday.

Montreal, Oct. 9.—(Special.)—His Eminence, the Archbishop of England in Canada, died this morning at his residence here at the age of 92. He had been ill some time.

The Right Reverend William Bond, M. A., LL.D., archbishop of Montreal and Metropolitan and Primate of All Canada, was born in Truro, Eng. in 1813. He received his education at one private and public schools in London and at an early age came to Newfoundland, where he labored for the Anglican ministry. Here he remained until 1860, when he came to Montreal and in 1870 became bishop of the province.

For several years under the auspices of the late Bishop Montague, he organized many

On Tuesday he was discovered under singular circumstances. Edna Hough, a girl of thirteen, with a small dog, was out for a walk in the mill pond, rowing when Edna said she saw an animal in the water ahead. There was certainly a dark object, but it was not a fish. It was a bear. It was a few minutes before Edna saw the three stripes at its back. At that time there was no movement, but minutes later the animal came to the shore and Mr. Brinn caught it. The three companions were then taken to the mill. It was there to give him a proper reception, and directly the bear was taken to the arm's length King's Arms Hotel, where it was kept for a few days. It was a stout stocky animal.

Although half dazed, the animal made another attempt to get on shore, but was of his courage and was taken to the mill. When Miss Hough, who was with her father is reputed to be the strongest person in Muskoka, seized the bear and doubtless hit its head back, the bear doubtless was a little more sober. People who have seen bears stories in somewhat the same way as the other people regard fish stories.

on this or that distant aspect. If there are evils in provincial politics in Canada, they need not be regarded as likely to yield to any change of system or of personnel, as long as the forces of political regeneration weaken with experience. But such faith may lead to the formation of a third party to pre-empt the main one, and thus to a permanent union. But there is opposition to the established provincial legislature, and a man who is comfortably elected is not likely to be so comfortable if he concludes that the existing system is not the best for improvement. The proposed union would lessen the number of representatives and the merit likely to cut off cannot be expected to be maintained. It would be a challenge to the existing system.

In fact, the lessening of the representation and cutting away of machinery of government are the chief benefits derived from the proposed union. The positions would be abolished or whose seats would be dispensed with must be expected to form a solid the best,

St. John's, Nfld., Oct. 10.—Popular agitation continues against the modus vivendi giving American fishermen privileges denied by the Newfoundland government. It is revealed that it terms the government's betrayal of the colony's interests.

In a published letter Archbishop Howland says the immediate calling of meetings throughout the colony to protest against the measure which he deems "a political and a religious error," neither a political nor a religious error, as he says, is a historical crisis in the colony, when every Newfoundland, native or resident, regardless of creed, class, or party, should rally to the common support.

Archbishop Howland cites the case of 1857 when the British government refused to grant the colony exclusive fishery to a large portion of the Newfoundland coast. The colony protested vigorously.

To conciliate the United States and to declare that the terms of the arrangement were not the just and intense indignation which is expressed.

The Morning Post is of the opinion that this should count as a victory for the colony, which has arrived to federate with Canada?

The Manchester Guardian says an explanation of the excitement in Newfoundland may perhaps be sought in a reasonable desire of colonial politicians, not too well learned in constitutional law, to gain a little more autonomy at the expense of the imperial authorities.

The Globe says if the contentions are proved, the New York news is a triumph for the continent, the whole empire, though we might as well abdicate our functions gracefully before our impatient children over the sea snatch them from us.

The Pall Mall Gazette says the colony

ously and sent delegates to join in the protest. In the face of the colonial agitation the British government eventually surrendered, though Queen Victoria and the French emperor, Archibald Howley pointed out, had already signed the convention.

British Press Comment.

London, Eng., Oct. 10.—The publication of the text of the Newfoundland modus vivendi evokes strong editorial articles this morning. The opposition newspapers condemn the government for overriding the wishes of the colony in order to settle the convention.

At the same time the London press interests have been subordinated to a supposed higher interest of keeping things all right at Washington. It is obvious enough that Newfoundland has partly to itself to blame for the weakness that helped to persuade her protector to assert her since she has refused to enter the Dominion of Canada. But it cannot be assumed that even if Newfoundland had stood with the United States at her own risk she would have found the imperial government staunch, because Canada herself has been subordinated to higher interests before now.

cord of Province as Big Game Country.

The record of the past ten days in the Bonny River (N. B.) hunting country is a decided answer to the disgruntled American visitor who failed to get his moose and complained that the country was not the same tandem it was said to be.

Within the past ten days sportsmen in the woods in the vicinity of the noted houseman, Thomas Dunbar, home at Bonny Lake, have made the following record for that one section of the province: Robert Cox, one moose; William Purdy, two moose and one deer; John Lee and Edward Lee, two moose; Harold Gage, one moose; George Maxwell, one moose; Charles Esmon, one moose; and James MacCallister, one—nine moose and one deer, besides other game not noted.

Connellsville, Pa., Oct. 7.—The will of L. Kerr, the late wealthy glassmaker of the plant of the Continuous Glass Bottle Company at Dunbar, formerly of Fort Burg, admitted to probate at T. E. Connolly court, is unique. After disposing of all his property to his sister, Emma Kerr Dunn, he closed the document with the words:

"I don't want a lot of money squandered on my burial. My sister needs the money and my old blind dog needs the bury and any old pig's box of cigars given to me by beerless. I want J. P. Hazlett, John George Baker and B. Montgomery to serve, and if they can't break down the grave and dig up the dead, let them serve and dump in and I am covered when she shake hands at the grave, then do home and take a drink, and know she will meet."

ABOUT WATER' IN 'FRISCO

San Francisco, Sept. 22.—"The aftermath" was a phrase in San Francisco years ago which seemed to me to be overworked and I referred to it as "the aftermath of the aftermath." It was simply to find its original source. It was simply to find the growth of grass after the harvest had been gathered."

And then my mind went back to the very green fields of New Brunswick, as I saw them during the Indian Summer, when I came from dry and dusty California some thirty odd years ago.

The aftermaths of our April disaster are too varied to even hint at, but one of the most beautiful to me is the abundance of flowers everywhere in this city for man and beast.

Previous to April 18 the organized hungry interests (which were managed with a polonaise-like quality) saw it as their duty and saloon and saloon together, were so inextricably intermeshed, it is said that John Victoria County Teachers' Institute.

Grand Falls, Oct. 3.—The annual meeting of the Victoria County Teachers' Institute took place at Anderson on the 4th and 5th inst.

Twenty-three teachers enrolled there as members.

The first session on Thursday morning was devoted to the election of officers and members of the association.

The officers elected were as follows:

President, Miss Janet Currie; Vice-president, Miss Millie L. Goodine; Secretary, Miss Margaret Macdonald; Treasurer, Miss Margaret Macdonald. Miss Goodine was appointed to serve in the executive committee.

Unfortunately the inspector, F. B. Ramsay, was unable to attend. J. C. Carruth, Miss Ramsay, who were down on program for papers, were unavoidably absent.

While it looked as though the "would be anything but" saved the situation, the paper on Discipline, N. B. H. writing a paper on Discipline, N. B. H. the paper, when read, proved to —one of those peoples' plans was to have watering troughs for the horses in front of saloons, the result being that the drivers were in honor bound to patronize the saloon as well as drinking up.

"It was many weeks we had prohibition which did prohibit, and because our water mains were broken, it was pathetic to see the horses head down at the troughs drinking up the water there. Of course," he says "it is that they got water by leaks." We, at the wharves, got one by hooks from the Contra.

All this is not done so vastly for the S. P. C. Draymen's Association and the S. P. C. to Animals have watering troughs breed high, plenty of them at that, where horses can drink and wash their cheeks and be cooled, and also giving their men on drink—I am tempted to tell of our barbaric temples; but must stick to the water.

One of the strange sights in our city used to be the place of Market street near the ferries, where neither man nor horse might drink; no fault of grand old Peter Donahide, old time blacksmith countryman, railroad builder and president. The liquor people simply queered it by a big platform so that horses could not reach it and no lancer or cup was there for the thirsty traveler.

"I did me good yesterday to see there a big horse-trough, over the sides of which was flowing bright clear Spring water, as though it would any day come from there in plenty more where it came from."
