SHADOWLESS MAN IN THE SHT PLACE; KNOWING FISH "The great beauty of fly fishing, is to see our fish before he takes your fly," says our secator; and say we, the great mischief of is that your fish generally sees you before a declines your fly. We were going to observe that we have seen a good deal of the abits of fish, but prefer to admit, on second hought, that the fish have probably seen a good deal more of ours. What wonder, when they are always on the watch as to what is going on around and above them, especially when the friendly sun projects your shadow so warningly to the fish? We have often thought when flogging the waters that if Peter Schlemihl's old geutleman should happen to pass and propose for our shadow, we should be sorely tempted to dispose of it, and see it doubled up on the great with positive pleasure. Had Peter himself taken to fly-fishing after his lamentable loss he would have been a happier man, and would have found consolation for his shadow less presence in the fullness of his creel.

To an angler who was complaining of the

would have found consolation for his shadowless presence in the fullness of his creel.

To an angler who was complaining of the absence of fish to a keeper of one of the Shropshire preserved water, said keeper replied, "Ah, there's plenty of fish, but they wontrise; and no wonder, Sir,—see what a hedecation they gets. There's so many gemmen a fishing now." Possibly this is a clue to so many amateur failures. The fish are becoming too knowing; and no marvel, for are they not taught in a public school and by much flogging? If anglers learn by books, trout learn by looks and by hooks. Instead of picking up our flies, they pick up a little notion of our faithlessness. If education be so rapidly progressing on land, depend upon it there is a kind of cautionary schooling going on under water. Probably many an old trout intimates, by well understood signs, to his young friends to beware of every tall moving thing that approaches the water and fling a fly on it. Perhaps he has been deceived twice or thrice in his own youth, and has turned misanthropist. If. too, he has been but once betrayed under the delusive feather, and has the hook still in his mouth, wherever he swims he is a swift monitor against all such mockeries: he has only to against all such mockeries: he has only to open his mouth and ecce signum! Should subsequeous education go on at that rate, very soon we fear, every one of Mr. Wade's one hundred and seventeen specimens of flies will be as well known to the fish as to the fishing man; and the only reply to any en-ticing offer will be "declined with thanks, as not suitable to these waters."

Diptheria now occupies a distinct line in the table of mortality in England. The pro-gress of this epidemic has been very rapid. In 1855 the deaths were 385; in 1856, 603; in 1857, in 1,583; in 1858, 6,606; and in 1859, 10,184. Dr. Guilmette, of New York, states that a fatal termination of the disease may be prevented by making an incision in the windpipe.

Over 84,000 persons emigrated from Ireland during 1800. In 1859 the emigration was 80,599.

The fortress at Sandy Hook commenced, in 1857, for the protection of New York harbor, is now being pursued forward for completion, and will be ready for occupation, it s said, this autumn.

The Protestants are to be allowed to open chools in France.
