

might add, been important. There is no reason to expect, therefore, that given the political will, the major human rights problems of this century cannot equally be dealt with, over time, by the international community. It is the task of decades - indeed of generations - and I assure you that Canada will continue to support practical and pragmatic actions to promote that end.

Thank you.