How Far Left?

B.C. New Democrats Worried About Extreme Wing

By Gerry Ohlsen Political Reporter

How dangerous is the extreme Left to the New Democratic Party?

BC New Democrats are now asking themselves that question and have been, ever since the prompted a party schism some described them as weeks ago over the issue of dickens.' "pure socialism.

Party leader R. Strachan headed off the left-wing pressure, saying that swing to the left would jeopardize New Democratic members in the provincial legislature.

Campus NDP leader Robin Hunter

made this statement:

"The so-called far left in the NDP can be numbered on the fingers of one hand.

UNDUE COVERAGE

"It is a completely unrepresent-ative group which seems to receive undue new coverage from sensationseeking news editors of the right.

"The vast majority of the members of the NDP are responsible Canadians who are seriously trying to find modern answers to today's problems.

"Parties like the NDP have been in power in many countries in the free world including the United Kingdom, the home of parliamentary democracy, and have proved themselves capable of advancing successful and responsible policies. To quote out of context the statement of a few irresponsible individuals, and represent them as the views of the whole party, is to grossly distort the true

TWO BREEDS OF NDP-ER

Preston Manning of the Social Credit Association on campus said that they consider there are two types of New Democrat.

The first type he called the "idealists." He said this type of person is concerned with "helping the masses, that they were without ideology, and party's extreme leftist wing that their intentions were good. He "naive as the

> The second type he considers to be philosophical socialists.

He said that his group considered the New Democratic leadership to be "hard left wingers"—that they were a "socialist philosophical group.

RESOLUTION DEFEATED

Ian Pitfield, leader of the campus Liberals, said that he would "accept that the NDP was justified in defeating the resolution of the extreme left wing faction.

"It recognizes the fact that the NDP is dying. Their left wing philosophy no longer can find acceptance in their party ranks. Douglas himself has suggested that the party must move right. This only proves that, since its inception,
