Yeomen get no respect

By ROBERTA DI MAIO

The University of Alberta will once again host the CIAU finals in 1988.

To host such an event properly, you must have great organizational skills. Unfortunately U of A has a lot to learn about organization if they want it to be successful next year.

Asking for eight dollars to get in to see university hockey is not very reasonable when you can pay a little more and see the NHL Oilers play Calgary.

Having no name tags at a Press Conference do not help any of the people present. You couldn't tell the reporters from the coaches unless you had made their acquaintance prior to the conference.

The Edmonton papers still insist on misspelling York players' names and for the Edmonton Journal, we had two new players for the tourney. Brian MacDonald, who was to have come from Fenton, Michigan (it's really Greg Rolston who's from Michigan) and Rob Craddock (Crocock) who won the first game's MVP for York University.

Seven programs for seven games sounds like a title of an old movie. U of A could have spent one lump sum and put out one program for the entire tourney and charged $3 once instead of a total of $7 (one dollar for each game).

Changes in practice times for York caused much embarrassment when York had to leave the Cooper Banquet early in order to arrive on time for their practice. To clarify any misperceptions, the emcee mentioned that York's departure was not in any way disrespectful to the event organizers.

One last thing. As a media representative at the tourney, I thought I would have a real media pass. The media passes handed out, however, were numbered and thin enough to slide through the cracks in the Arena's walls.

LOOKING FOR A CAREER IN COMMUNICATION?

Centennial College provides the "hands-on" training you need. Consider these full-time programs:

CORPORATE COMMUNICATION

Our graduates are writers, editors and information officers, to name a few. You'll learn to plan, write and produce brochures, newsletters, news releases and other publications.

BOOK AND MAGAZINE PUBLISHING

You'll be involved in the editing, marketing and overall design of books and magazines. According to Quill and Quire Magazine, Centennial graduates "...probably have a more thorough knowledge of publishing than a lot of their prospective employers."

JOURNALISM

The focus is print journalism. Our program includes 4 months of full-time work experience. You'll learn reporting, photography, copy editing, layout, and more.
