

12. Mr. Warren replied that all their Consular Offices in Canada would be able to issue visas.

13. He thought that their larger offices - those in Montreal, Toronto, Windsor, Winnipeg and Vancouver - were sufficiently staffed.

14. Their other offices would require an immediate increase in staff, which the State Department is prepared to authorize on a daily basis. These smaller offices are those at Halifax, Yarmouth, St. John (New Brunswick), Fredericton, St. Stephen, Quebec, Niagara Falls, London, Fort William-Port Arthur, Calgary, Regina, Edmonton and Victoria.

15. They contemplate opening almost immediately new Consular Offices in Sarnia, Sault Ste. Marie, Kingston and Sherbrooke, and they might possibly open offices at Campbellton and Sydney.

16. My apprehensions over the effect of the new regulations on Canada's tourist trade have not been allayed by the final paragraph which was inserted in the Department of State's press release. I am almost certain that Mr. Pierrepont Moffat agrees that, though the insertion of this paragraph was desirable as a temporary expedient, the competent authorities in the United States and Canada should try to formulate some better statement. Mr. Wailes informally suggested that perhaps Mr. Leo Dolan of the Canadian Travel Bureau and Mr. Bruce Macnamee, Director of the United States Travel Bureau, might discuss this matter after the negotiations between the two governments had been concluded. Mr. Wailes says that Mr. Macnamee has been in close touch with Mr. Dolan and that he is most interested in trying to stimulate the flow of United States tourists to Canada.

I have the honour to be,
with the highest respect,
Sir,
Your most obedient,
humble servant,

(Signed) M.M. Mahoney.
Chargé d'Affaires.
