PATRONAGE IN THE STATES.

It is announced from Washington that the executive orders which the President signed before he left on his present trip put under the classified civil service almost the last bits of patronage left to members of Congress.

The President lopped off about 375 patronage positions when he ordered that cashiers and finance clerks in the big postoffices should be put in the classified list, providing the postmaster general endorsed their efficiency. No future appointments may be made to these positions unless the appointees have passed a civil service examination.

Heretofore these have been purely political jobs. All laborers in the Government departments are now classified, and this rule will prevent slipping some fellow into a nice genteel desk job and putting his name on the roll as a laborer, he thereby escaping the service test. All immigrant inspectors serving in contiguous countries must hereafter pass a civil service examination. This takes from the spoilsman a number of good places.

Postmaster-General Cortelyou has put into operation a system which it is declared will take out of the reach of the spoilsman about 70,000 fourth-class postoffice places. In fact, the number of places which are now opened to appointment without examination is so small that it is much easier to enumerate them than it is to enumerate those for which an examination is required. There is a prospect that even the present exempt list will be made smaller before long.

Deputy-collectorships of internal revenue, about 1,000 in number, are still open to the office-grabbers, but it is said that these, with the field deputies in the office of United States marshals, will soon be converted into the classified lists. And with them may go some 1,200 assistant postmasterships.

ROJESTVENSKY'S CHALLENGE.

Although the accounts vary as to the number of Russian ships that have passed through the Malacca Strait, and it is reported that Admiral Rojestvensky himself and the most powerful of his vessels are not with the squadrons that have been sighted, it may be taken for granted that the absentees are not very far off. The Russian commander is apparently about to throw down the gage of battle to the Japanese. He will need every ship and every gun at his service to put himself on something like terms of equality with Admiral Togo, and it cannot be assumed that he would commit the folly of dividing his forces in the presence of the enemy.

The superiority of the Russian fleet is purely nominal. It contains seven battleships against the five included in Admiral Togo's squadrons, but two of the former are of an obsolescent type. To the Russian armored cruisers, two in number, the Japanese can oppose seven homogeneous vessels of recent construction. The strength of the two fleets in armored ships is therefore respectively, nine and twelve; but it is likely that two or more of Japan's armored cruisers are on the watch for a possible sortie of the Russian squadron at Vladivostok. If so, there would be little, if any, preponderance in numbers and a scarcely estimable superiority in weight of broadside fire for either party. In the qualities that count, however—in precision of gunfire and tactical ability—there is hardly room for comparison between the two forces. In warfare, to be sure, there is always an element of luck, which occasionally proves decisive; but barring a misadventure of this character the victory of the Japanese in the prospective encounter is almost a certainty.

It must be perfectly well understood by the Russians, from the Admiral down to the meanest sailor, that in all probability they are going to their doom. It is a solemn spectacle—these fifteen thousand or more brave fellows courting death and destruction, merely to show that if they cannot win, they are good men and true. "This," to invert a famous saying, "may not be war, but it is splendid."—S. Ratford Herald.

Mr. Tompkins, a member of the New York State Assembly, has earned an undying claim to immortal fame. In the "Star Spangled Banner" there is this verse with reference to Englishmen—

"And where is that band, who so vauntingly swore,
 That the havoc of war and the battle's confusion,
 A home and a country should leave us no more?"

Their blood has washed out their foul footsteps' pollution.
 No refuge could save the hireling and slave,
 From the terrors of flight or the gloom of the grave."

School Superintendent Maxwell, a Britisher by birth, substituted another verse for the use of the scholars, and Tompkins has since been bristling over with indignation to an extent which would by comparison make a fretful porcupine look like a downy sofa cushion. As the outcome Tompkins has had the assembly reinstate the verse, and they say that he confidentially considers that Washington and Lincoln alongside of him are, not only a couple of has-beens, but never wores.

APPETIZING NAMES.

At Montreal the advertising manager of the Canadian Pacific railway is a man named Ham, and the city ticket office is in charge of a man named Egg. The two are fast friends and if both happen to be out of town at once inquiries for Ham and Egg are frequent. By a coincidence both report to an official named Bacon, whose chief clerk is named Brown. Recently Ham and Egg were both in Bacon's office. The telephone rang and Brown answered. He caught an inquiry for the Canadian Pacific office, and said:

"This is it."
 "Who's this talking?" asked the voice.

"This is Brown. Do you want Bacon?"

"No, I don't want Bacon, Brown or any other way. I want one of the Canadian Pacific officials."

"Well, will Ham and Egg do?"

"I don't want any of them! Central, switch that cheap hash house off this wire!"
